A MILLION CHEER 77TH IN FINAL HIKE OF WAR UP 5TH AV.

Great Throngs Sobered by Pageant for the Dead Bearing 2,356 Gold Stars.

BRING TEARS TO MANY EYES

PASS A POINT IN 44 MINUTES

Parade Seen by Spectators as Wonderful Demonstration of War's Americanization.

With more than a million spectators cheering and relatives and friends shouting personal greetings to individual marchers in all the modern languages, the 77th Division paraded in Fifth Avenue yesterday from Washington Square to 110th Street, in one of the finest military spectacles which the city has ever witnessed.

Marching in compact formation, one mass of men following another, turning the great highway into a river running bank-full with olive drab and steel, the whole 27,000 passed in between forty-three and forty-four minutes—more than a minute less than the scheduled time.

These New York boys, though drawn from nearly every race on earth, made a dashing and magnificent picture. In the mass they looked like the hard fighters who broke Germany's back in the Argonne. Individually they were still the good-hearted, happy-go-lucky youngsters who sailed away a year ago.

Everybody in New York whom the police would allow to be there, was present to do them honor. About a million people saw them and about a million were turned away under severe police regulations which kept the crowds a block away in the cross streets on either side of the Avenue after 8 o'clock in the morning.

But among those who found places before the police beleaguered the Avenue, or who ran the blockade afterward, were colonies representing about every section of the globe, shouting good American sentiments in nearly every tongue, dialect, and accent brought into existence by the original confusion of tongues.

Sing Kee, the highly Americanized Color Sergeant of the 306th Infantry, was the star exotic, and was greeted from one end of the line of march to the other by Americans of every color of skin, as well as by the sharers in his reflected glory from Pell and Mott Streets. Jews from many lands, Italians, Armenians, Poles, Greeks, Czechoslovaks, Jugoslavs, Rumanians, Hungarians, Germans, and many other original ingredients of the melting-pot were there to see their sons and relatives—now Americans all, and the backbone of the nation—having their day of glory.

Crowds Kept in Order

The crowds started to gather before dawn and had reached tremendous numbers before 8 o'clock, when the police, anxious to prevent the unseemly and dangerous crowding which marred the welcome to the Twenty-seventh, shut off general access to Fifth Avenue and caused deep disappointment to hundreds of thousands. The crowd were marshaled by the police into rectangular throngs on the Fifth Avenue sidewalks, neat and regular groups under strict discipline, in contrast to the surging, unruly mobs that hampered the earlier spectacle.

The crowd was kept anxious reading the weather signs in the sky up to the time of the parade's arrival. It was chilly, after the hot weather of the last few days, and there were threats of rain, but luck was with New York and the sky cleared, even as the division was on the march.

There was enough wind to flutter the hundreds of thousands of little flags and to keep the big flags which overhung the Avenue slowly billowing. It was too dark and threatening for the airplanes at first, but they began to fly about, close to earth, looking as big as bungalows, when the division was well on its way.

There was too much reason for sadness for the occasion to be a riot of exuberance. The Companies of the Dead, for whom a cortège of honor marched at the head of the division, were too large a part in the parade and there was hardly a block along the line on which there were no personal mourners for some of the 2,356 who had given their lives for their country.

But the greeting which New York gave to the boys who had written a glorious page in history and brought the city credit for it was whole-hearted and sincere, and expressed as much in tears as in smiles. The crowds were struck no less by the impressive force of the individual soldiers than by the formidable, aggressive aspect of the mass.

There were plenty of straight Americans among them when they left for Yaphank, and most of those of foreign

Britain Recognizes Finland; Commons Cheers the News

LONDON, May 6, (via Montreal.)—The British Government has recognized the independence of Finland and the de facto Finnish Government, according to an announcement by Cecil Harmsworth, Parliamentary Secretary for Foreign Affairs, in the House of Commons today.

The announcement was greeted with cheers.

The Council of Foreign Ministers at Paris on Monday decided that recognition would be extended to the Government of Finland under certain conditions, which are not disclosed.

NAVY PLANES' START EXPECTED THURSDAY

Weather Reports from New England and Nova Scotian Coasts Delay Flight.

NC-1 REPAIRS COMPLETED

Officers Were at Hangars and All Was in Readiness at the Appointed Hour Yesterday.

The squadron of United States naval seaplanes was tuned up and ready to be launched into Jamaica Bay, preparatory to starting on the first leg of the flight that is scheduled to take them across the Atlantic to Portugal, at dawn of yesterday, when weather observers along the coastline from Rockaway Beach to Nova Scotia began calling the station on the long-distance telephone. Up to that time it seemed certain that the seaplanes, in command of Commander John H. Towers, would start soon after 8 o'clock, and even after the first few observers had reported weather conditions as being unfavorable for flight the naval aviators continued to hope that there would be a sudden and favorable change which would make possible a start for Halifax before 8:30 o'clock. But the weather reports continued to stay unfavorable, and at 9 o'clock Commander Towers announced that the "hop off" was postponed pending favorable weather conditions.

"The flight," said Commander Towers, "is off for today. We have received telephonic reports from all the weather stations along the New England and Nova Scotian coasts and the conditions are such that I have decided to postpone the start for Halifax until they change for the better. The reports are that storm conditions prevail and that the wind, which is now against us, is increasing. We will start the moment we receive reports that the conditions are favorable. That may be tomorrow morning, at least that is what we are hoping."

At 10 o'clock last night Commander Towers authorized the announcement that there would be no start for Halifax today. The announcement added that weather conditions were more favorable for flight on Thursday morning, and that preparations to get away on that day would be pushed.

A little before 10 o'clock the last weather report was received. This indicated southerly winds along the route from Rockaway to Nova Scotia, followed by low clouds and probable rain in that vicinity.

Commander Towers explained that it was the direction and not the force of yesterday's wind that made it inadvisable to start. The wind was from north-northeast and would have been directly in the faces of the aviators. The pilots estimated that instead of seven and one-half hours, which is the estimated time for the flight to Halifax under favorable conditions, at least fifteen hours would be required to cover the distance.

All Ready for the "Hop Off."

"The pressure area," Commander Towers said, "was central over that part of the country of which Chicago is the centre. Last night it was estimated that the unfavorable weather was headed east at a speed of about twenty miles an hour. At that rate we would have been on the eastern edge of the wind this morning and would have been able to get away in front of it. However, during the night the wind increased to thirty or forty miles an hour, and instead of being on the edge we are right in the middle of it."

The officers who will pilot and navigate the seaplanes during the effort to cross the Atlantic were called at 4:30 o'clock yesterday morning. Half an hour later they were at the hangars in leather and furs ready to "hop off" whenever Commander Towers gave the word. Furthermore, a pleasant and at the same time a record-breaking surprise awaited them. This was the NC-1, the seaplane whose two right wings were destroyed by fire early Monday morning, following an accidental ignition of gasoline in the hangar where the plane was being finally overhauled. Monday night it was announced that the NC-1, which will be commanded by Lieut. Commander Patrick N. L. Bellinger, would not accompany the NC-3 and NC-4 in the event those machines started as per schedule yesterday morning.

But something happened during the night, and, when Commander Towers, Lieut. Commander Bellinger and other officers arrived at the hangars there was the NC-1 on the launching ways ready

REPORTS ROADS RAN SHORT $192,000,000 IN THREE MONTHS

NO IMPROVEMENT IN SIGHT

OPPOSES RATE RISE NOW

Better to Wait Till Conditions Are Normal—Deficit in Express Operation Also.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Walker D. Hines, as Director General of Railroads, issued a statement tonight in which he invited attention to the results of the Government's operation of the railroads during the first three months of the calendar year 1919 by asserting that the aggregate deficit incurred during those months, after deducting the rental due the railroad companies for that period, was $192,000,000.

The announcement was made at the same time that figures were made public, as compiled by the Bureau of Railway Economics from Interstate Commerce Commission reports, indicating that the deficit was nearly $133,000,000 during the first quarter of this year. The discrepancy is believed to be due to the fact that in figuring the deficit the Director General based it on the average return of $75,000,000 a month, instead of on the basis of the actual three-year average for the months of January, February, and March.

That the Director General has an idea that the showing of the roads under Government management might result in agitation for an increase in rates is apparent from his statement that his own judgment is that "the present conditions are too abnormal to serve as a basis for any general change in the level of rates and that it is preferable to defer action on that subject until there shall have been a fuller opportunity to get a more reliable measure of conditions."

The railroad deficit for the first quarter of 1919 of nearly $133,000,000 is disclosed by the March reports to the Interstate Commerce Commission. The three months' net operating income for Class 1 roads, including switching and terminal companies, was $39,813,000, as compared with a average in the three-year test period (1914-17) of $172,798,000.

The January deficit was $37,830,000, February $37,828,000, and March $57,327,000. The net operating income for March was $10,924,000, as compared with the March average in the test period of $68,251,000.

Falling Off in March.

Traffic declined very sharply in March, the freight traffic falling 23.2 per cent. below a year ago, as compared with a 13.5 per cent. decline in February and a 10 per cent. gain in January. Operating revenues were $376,345,000, a gain of 2.9 per cent. over last year, while the expenses rose 22.2 per cent. to $346,770,000, leaving net revenues of $29,574,000, a loss of 63.9 per cent. This left a net operating income, after taxes and minor deductions, of $10,924,000, a loss of 82.5 per cent.

The Eastern roads failed in March to earn any net operating income. They had a deficit of $1,283,000. The Southern roads earned $4,489,000 and the Western earnings were $7,719,000. These earnings will be even less when adjustments of back wages are made for recent wage increases granted the trainmen's brotherhoods. These recent increases are adding about $5,500,000 a month to operating expenses.

Comparison of operating results can be made for the first quarter of 1919 with the average for the same months in the three-year test period before the Government took over the roads. The total freight traffic handled in the first three months of 1919 was 85,000,000,000,-ton miles, as compared with an average of 85,500,000,000 in the test period, a difference of less than 1 per cent.

The operating results for the two periods compare as follows:

Operating revenue—First quarter, 1919, $1,125,078,000; 1915-1917 average, $821,000,000; increase, $304,068,000, or 37 per cent.

Belgium Wants $500,000,000 At Once from U. S. or Allies

BRUSSELS, May 6, (Associated Press.)—The Belgian Government has decided to ask the Allies or the United States for an immediate loan of $500,000,000.

"Without such aid, the country will be lost," said M. Jaspar, Minister of Economics, to The Associated Press today. "This loan will be secured by German indemnities. It will not suffice for Belgium to receive a priority indemnity to the extent of half a billion dollars. This sum will not be forthcoming for a couple of years and it is impossible for Belgium to hold out that long.

"Even with the removal of the burden of her war debt Belgium is under an enormous weight, financially and economically. With this sum and with an equal sum loaned immediately to Belgium, the country will be able to recuperate. Otherwise it will be impossible to go on.

It is well known that 750,000 people are idle here and the Belgian Government is now paying 50,000,000 francs to them each month, pending the reopening of factories and the resumption of work by the people."

RECORD DAY GIVES IMPETUS TO LOAN

Official Total Exceeds That of District's Fourth Campaign for Same Time.

Many Sales Not Included in the Sum—Must Still Take $158,545,520 Daily.

The Victory Loan drive in the Second Federal Reserve District took a spurt yesterday that landed it ahead of the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign for the corresponding time. An official total of $553,066,400 in subscriptions was reported for New York City and $145,352,500 for the district. This is the best day of the campaign by more than $50,000,000, and the men in charge were enthusiastic over the prospect that the district would live up to its record in past war loans.

A comparison of the figures for this and the fourth loan on the same day shows that five days before the end of the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign a total of $535,416,000 had been subscribed in bonds. Last night's totals in the district showed $557,272,400.

Unofficial figures which have not yet been recorded at the Federal Reserve Bank undoubtedly will swell the total to more than $600,000,000 for the district, with a day's record of more than $200,000,000. The Advisory Trades Committee reported more than $20,000,000 for the Rainbow Division which had not been recorded, and the Metropolitan Canvass Committee had a total of $23,756,800 in new subscriptions which also had not been incided in the official figures.

The following is the official table made public by the Central Committee:

For the remaining business days of the Victory Liberty Loan campaign $158,545,520 must be raised daily by the entire district in order to reach a total of $1,350,000,000.

The good results meant no relexation in the efforts of those directing the loan drive to keep up the mark. Parades, rallies, as well as all sorts of other demonstrations to catch popular attention, have been planned for the last days.

Baltimore Elects a Republican Mayor; Home Rule Slogan Helped in Victory

BALTIMORE, May 6.—William F. Broening, Republican, the present State's Attorney for Baltimore, was elected Mayor today by a plurality of about 9,000 over George Weems Williams, Democrat.

Peter E. Tome, Republican, was elected Controller.

The Democrats elected a majority of both branches of the City Council, including Howard Bryant for President of the Second Branch.

The independent vote went to Broening. Hundreds of Democrats, disappointed at the defeat of Mayor Preston for renomination by Williams in the primary a month ago, voted for Broening, but at the same time supported the Democratic candidates for the Council.

Home rule was a popular slogan of the Republican campaign because Williams, the Democratic candidate for Mayor, was supported by the State organization, the Republicans charging interference by the Democratic State managers in the municipal campaign.

The labor vote also helped largely in Broening's election.

Return of Italians Surprises Paris After Sonnino's "Ultimatum."

IT HELD ALLIES TO COMPACT

OPTIMISM IS FELT NOW

But Allied Spokesman Says Resolution Not to Italianize Fiume Is Unaltered.

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 5.—The Italian situation has undergone a kaleidoscopic change, affording ground for the greatest encouragement. Clemenceau received a telegram from Orlando today saying that the Italian plenipotentiaries would arrive in Paris on Wednesday, and that they had forwarded credentials for presentation to the German peace delegates.

Nothing is known as to the frame of mind in which the Italians return, but the general view is that the difficulties over Fiume are certain to be removed. Orlando's message caused profound astonishment. Within a few days Clemenceau and Lloyd George telegraphed an invitation to Orlando to return and discuss with them, as the representative of an ally bound by the treaty of London, the application of that agreement.

On top of this, Clemenceau and Lloyd George received yesterday from Sonnino, as Italian Foreign Minister, a message declaring that Italy would hold her allies to the agreement to make no separate peace, and that the treaty could not be signed by them without Italy's consent. This was construed as an ultimatum and as an apparent answer to the invitation from the British and French Premiers.

It was with amazement, therefore, that the British and French received word today from Orlando that he was returning to Paris and sending in advance the credentials of the Italian plenipotentiaries for their participation in the exchanges with the Germans. An allied spokesman said this evening that there had been no modification of the refusal of President Wilson, Clemenceau, and Lloyd George to cede Fiume to Italy, and that the Italians were coming back without any promise or assurance that their demands would be granted.

WILSON'S POSITION VITAL.

Paris Matin Wonders if He Will Settle Adriatic Problem.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 6.—Although much has been gained in the mere determination of Premier Orlando of Italy to return to Paris in time for the handling of the peace terms to the German delegates tomorrow, there is much yet to be done before an Adriatic solution is reached.

According to the Matin, the whole thing now waits on President Wilson. It says:

"All the solutions that have been studied have this in common: They confer the sovereignty of Fiume upon Italy, either immediately or in the future. What does President Wilson think about it?

"It would be useless to deny that according to all we know of Wilson's intentions he has not yet made this concession, so essential from the Italian viewpoint. Will he evolve something in the next fifteen days that will enable Italy to join in signing peace with Germany? If he does, all difficulty will be avoided. If he does not, what will Italy do?

"Italy has just given proof of her conciliatory spirit by returning her plenipotentiaries to Paris spontaneously, without the Council of Three having agreed upon a proposition to make to her. This conciliatory spirit ought not to be expected to go to the extent of renouncing the advantages conferred by the treaty of London.

If Italy gives up Fiume we may expect that she will demand the full terms of that treaty, but President Wilson is as pronounced against the annexation of Dalmatia as against the annexation of Fiume.

The situation is modified, however, in the sense that France and England, according to their assurances, ought to espouse the cause of Italy.

Perhaps the Serbs and the Croats will decide that it is more to their advantage to have all of Dalmatia than to enter into perpetual conflict with Italy to support their demands for Fiume.

"This much we know. The Italians

Economic Boycott Will Isolate Germany If She Refuses to Sign the Peace Treaty.

PARIS, May 6, (Associated Press.)—The complete economic isolation of Germany is being considered by the Council of Foreign Ministers of the Peace Conference as a measure to be adopted in the event that Germany refuses to sign the Peace Treaty.

The plan for the measure was submitted to the Ministers by the Supreme Economic Council, which issued a statement dealing with its proposals on that line and also measures for the removal of financial restrictions of trade with Germany. The statement reads:

The Supreme Economic Council held its sixteenth meeting May 5 at 10 A. M. under the Chairmanship of Lord Robert Cecil.

Proposed blockade measures to be adopted in the event of Germany refusing to sign the peace treaty:

The council considered plans which had been formulated to bring about the complete economic isolation of Germany in the event that the German delegates should refuse to sign the preliminaries of peace. The blockade section was directed to draw up and submit for the approval of the Council of Foreign Ministers a plan of blockade measures to be immediately put into effect, should the associated Governments desire to have recourse to economic coercion.

Removal of financial restrictions of trade with Germany:

Upon recommendation by the financial section, the Council decided to make the following relaxations of financial restrictions of trade with Germany pending the signing of the Peace Treaty:

First: The financial list to be suspended (if this has not been done already) and announcement to be made that neutrals are entirely free to extend credits of any kind to Germany or to its nationals.

Second: That German-owned cash, balances, and bills already in neutral countries are freely available in payment for imports.

Third: That the proceeds of exports from Germany may be freely available in payment for all kinds of permitted imports.

Fourth: That the finance section shall have discretion to grant licenses for the export of gold and securities from Germany in payment for imports, on application from the German authorities.

Fifth: That the above be communicated to the Financial Commission at Villette and to the Committee of Neutral Financiers, and that their suggestions be invited as to what further relaxations are desired by them.

Control of traffic on the Danube:

The Council considered again the question of the control of navigation on the Danube, and it was decided that this control should be placed entirely under one authority. A sub-committee was appointed to arrange the details with a view to expediting the reopening of commercial and relief traffic on the Danube.

Anti-Reds Holding Vienna Legation Also Hid Bela Kun's 150,000,000 Crowns.

NEW GOVERNMENT FORMING

Count Batthyany in Cabinet with Which Advancing Rumanians Will Treat.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, May 4, via Geneva, May 5.—The Vienna police to-day began an investigation of the mysterious breaking into the palace of the Hungarian Legation, the reported carrying away of some 150,000,000 crowns, and the abducting of the two Hungarian Ministers, Bolgar and Fenyo, by officers of the former Hungarian bodyguard at Vienna.

Der Neue Tag asserts that the English correspondent, Ashmead-Bartlett, was concerned in the affair. He, it was said, was suspected of having carried the money to Colonel Cunningham. Chief of the British Mission, who is said to have given a receipt for it. Colonel Cunningham, however, publicly denies having had anything to do with the matter. Mr. Ashmead-Bartlett, though admitting that he was present, denies all knowledge of the money.

The whereabouts of the abducted Ministers is unknown. The same mystery also prevails concerning the treasure said to have been taken away.

The Hungarian Government has entered an energetic complaint against what it terms a flagrant breach of international law. The Austrian Government is determined to prevent officers who are believed to be instigated by Hungarian politicians from trying to start a counter-revolution in Hungary. The situation is further complicated by the detection of evidence among the papers of the legation that a Bolshevist plot was to be carried out in Vienna by the Hungarian Communists who were arrested this afternoon.

A new Hungarian Government is in process of formation. The members mentioned are Count Batthyany, formerly a member of the Karolyi Cabinet, and the Socialists Garami and Diener-Denes.

According to a Bucharest report, the Rumanians refuse to consider the terms offered by Bela Kun and are insisting on the occupation of Budapest and on dealing only with the new Government.

VIENNA, May 4, (Associated Press.)—The Hungarian Legation here was still occupied today by Hungarians opposed to the Communist Government, in spite of protests from Bela Kun, the Communist Foreign Minister, threatening retaliation against the German Austrian Ministry in Budapest unless the Austrians drove the anti-Communists from

Col. House Attends for United States—Care Taken to Avoid Any Permanent Action.

PARIS, May 5.—Stephen Pichon, the Minister of Foreign Affairs of France, was elected Chairman of the provisional organization of the League of Nations today, according to an official statement issued after the meeting, which was held at the American headquarters. Sir Eric Drummond of Great Britain assumed his duties as Acting Secretary General, an office to which he was elected at the meeting of the peace delegates last week. The text of the statement reads:

"The Organization Committee of the League of Nations, which was appointed by a resolution of the plenary conference on April 28, held its first meeting at the Hotel Crillon at 4 o'clock on Monday, May 5, and agreed on a number of resolutions for the provisional organization of the league.

"On motion of Colonel E. M. House of the United States, M. Pichon, Minister of Foreign Affairs, was elected Chairman and Sir Eric Drummond was invited to occupy his seat as Acting Secretary General.

"The following were present: M. Pichon, France, Chairman; Colonel E. M. House, United States; Lord Robert Cecil, Great Britain; Marquis Imperial, Italy; Viscount Chinda, Japan; M. Rolin Jacquemyns, Belgium; M. Venizelos, Greece; Señor Guinones de Leon, Spain, and Antonio O. de Magalhaes, Brazil.

In adopting the rules for the temporary organization care was taken by the committee that nothing of a permanent nature should be done previous to the ratification of the peace treaty by the United States Senate.

Labor Conference Also Organizing.

LONDON, May 6, (Associated Press.)—The Organizing Committee of the International Labor Conference, formed under the peace treaty, held its first meeting in London today. Professor J. T. PARIS, May 6.—A war responsibility section providing for the trial of the Kaiser and his subordinates by the great powers was put into the peace treaty without discussion or protest at the secret plenary session of the Peace Conference this afternoon.

Then Captain Tardieu read for the benefit of the delegates of the small powers the 10,000-word digest of the treaty, which was the first intimation that any of them had had of it in its entirety, so far as they were directly concerned.

There were some speeches but no threats from Belgium or any other country to withdraw. Marshal Foch uttered a passionate protest against the settlement about the left bank of the Rhine.

Some interest and amusement was caused by the fact that the first delegate to arrive at this plenary session was Signor Crespi of Italy, one of the subordinates who was left in Paris by Premier Orlando.

At the outset of the reading of the digest an interpreter began, as usual, to translate it by sections into English. Then it occurred to somebody that the American and English delegates did not need any digest for their information, so M. Clemenceau suspended the translation to save time.

There is a notable increase in cheerfulness in Paris tonight on the eve of the handing of the treaty to the Germans at Versailles tomorrow, and many think the treaty will be signed in fifteen days. One of the best things in the treaty, from the French viewpoint, is that Germany must recognize the independence of Austria and not annex that country, at least not till after a plebiscite under the direction of the League of Nations.

Even the Italians in Paris are greatly relieved that Orlando is on his way back here, although they have not the slightest assurance that President Wilson will change his Adriatic policy.

Reservations Are Simply Noted.

PARIS, May 6, (Associated Press.)—The plenary Peace Conference completed its work today so far as Germany is concerned, and at a secret plenary session communicated the terms of the peace treaty to all the powers represented at the conference. This was the last act before delivery of the treaty to the Germans at Versailles tomorrow.

Captain Andre Tardieu read a summary of the treaty, as the complete text was not ready when the session was called.

The reading of the summary began in French, an English interpretation being given later. When it was observed that many delegates were not following the English interpretation, A. J. Balfour, British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, said that this would be abandoned and that the digest would from that point on be presented in French only.

One of the notable features incorporated in the treaty was that dealing with the responsibility of former Emperor William and providing for his trial for "a supreme offense against international morality and the sanctity of treaties" by a tribunal composed of representatives of the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy, and Japan.

When the reading of the summary was concluded, reservations were made in behalf of Portugal, China, Italy and France, although these reservations were understood as applicable to viewpoints on various phases of the treaty rather than as objections to the adoption of the pact as a whole. No action was taken on the reservations except to announce that they had been duly noted.

The reservations, however, raise the question whether they will be maintained in signing the treaty by the nations making them and whether the conference will permit signatures with reservations. While this contingency is being discussed, the reservations are not expected to interfere with the procedure of presenting the treaty to the Germans.

Portugal objected to what were said to be clauses giving insufficient financial recognition for the part she had taken in the war.

The most striking protest was that of Marshal Foch, who declared that the security given France was inadequate from a military point of view, and said it was his personal conviction that the treaty should not be signed.

The Marshal emphasized the necessity of France holding the bridgeheads along the Rhine, and said that occupation limited to fifteen years was not sufficient.

The Chinese delegation presented a brief, formal, and dignified protest concerning the disposition of the controversy with Japan, Lu Cheng-hsiang, the Chinese Foreign Minister, asking for reconsideration of the decision regarding Shantung and Kiao-Chau.

He said that in the opinion of the Chinese delegation the decision had been made without regard for justice or for the protection of the territorial integrity of China. He said that, if reconsideration was impossible, he desired to make reservation on behalf of China.

Italy was represented at the session by Signor Crespi, who said he desired to make reservations concerning any provisions in the treaty not acceptable to Italy.

The session was held in the Foreign Office, with the same setting and distinguished personnel as at previous public sessions, except in the case of Italy, which today was represented by Dr. Silvio Crespi, the former Food Administrator, pending the arrival of Premier Orlando and Foreign Minister Sonnino tomorrow.

Enormous throngs surrounded the Foreign Office, watching the arrival of the delegates. Among those who assembled within the building were Marshal Foch and the British Admiral Sir Rosslyn Wemyss, with their staffs.

The session was held under conditions of unusual secrecy, all doors and windows being closed, despite the fact that the day was exceptionally warm.

The Conference adjourned at 5:15 o'clock. The draft of the instrument is now considered as having passed the last stage before being presented to the Germans.

The credentials of the Italian delegates to the Peace Congress were handed this morning to the German plenipotentiaries at Versailles. This official announcement was made this evening.

LONDON, May 6.—A dispatch to the Central News from Paris says the most interesting feature of the plenary session of the Peace Conference today was the unanimous adoption of articles providing for the trial of the former German Emperor and those responsible for crimes and atrocities during the war.

BERLIN COMMITTEE IN TOUCH.

Members of Assembly Ready for Quick Conference on Terms.

BERLIN, May 6. (Associated Press.)—The Peace Committee of the National Assembly held its fourth meeting last night and received advices by telephone from Spa that the Entente would present its peace terms to the Germans on Wednesday afternoon.

The committee thereupon determined to continue its sitting so as to be ready to confer with the peace delegation regarding the terms at any time. It is believed here that it will be impossible to complete a translation of the peace treaty before Saturday or Monday.

GERMANS HAVE NOT LEFT.

VERSAILLES, May 5. (Associated Press.)—The report that the German Ministers Landsberg and Giesberts have left the German peace delegation and returned to Berlin is untrue.

22 BELLIGERENTS TO MEET GERMANS

China and Others, at First Excluded, Will Be Represented at Session.

CLEMENCEAU WILL PRESIDE

PARIS, May 6. (Associated Press.)—When the German delegates enter the dining room of the Trianon Palace Hotel tomorrow afternoon to receive the text of the treaty of peace, they will find the representatives of the Powers arrayed against Germany awaiting them at one of the great tables which have been placed in the room. Premier Clemenceau, President Wilson, and Premier Lloyd George will stand at the head of the table.

The Germans will not join the allied delegates at this time, but will be conducted to a smaller table standing by itself at the open end of the great horseshoe formed by the green-covered tables arranged for the meeting. There they will listen to M. Clemenceau's opening address and receive the judgment of the allied and associated nations, as formulated in a volume of conditions drawn up during the four months of deliberation by the Interallied Conference.

On M. Clemenceau's right will be President Wilson and the other American delegates, while on his left Premier Lloyd George and the British representatives will be grouped. Flanking the Americans will come the French delegation, with Marshal Foch in the centre. Next to these will be the representatives of Italy, Belgium, Brazil, Greece, Portugal, and Serbia. On the left side and seated below the delegates of Great Britain will be those of the British Dominions, Japan, Poland, Rumania, and Czechoslovakia.

Two tables have been placed for the general secretaries of the Interallied Conference directly behind President Wilson and Premier Lloyd George. Secretaries of individual delegations will have seats at the sides of the room behind their respective delegations. The four big cut glass chandeliers which hang from the ceiling of the hall will be scarcely needed at the hour set for the ceremony, at 3:15 P. M.

It was decided late today that the following delegations which were to be excluded will be admitted to the Congress at Versailles tomorrow when the peace terms are handed to the Germans: China, Siam, Cuba, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Haiti, Panama, Liberia, and Honduras.

The Chinese delegation had appealed to President Wilson to intercede for China's inclusion in the list of the countries to be represented.

The original official list of the countries to be represented was:

The United States, Great Britain and her Dominions, France, Italy, Japan, Belgium, Brazil, Serbia, Greece, Poland, Portugal, Rumania, and Czechoslovakia.

Both China and Siam were omitted from this list, as likewise were seven Latin-American States which declared war upon Germany. The list was drawn on the theory that only those of the powers which had rendered efficient aid in prosecuting the war were to attend the ceremony.

The other Allies were to have positions outside the building at the time the ceremony took place, but the Chinese and other participants in the war were not willing to attend unless they had representation within the hall.

Only six of the principal German delegates, three secretaries, official interpreters, and an official stenographer will be admitted out of the large German delegation, according to present arrangements. The subordinates will have tables immediately behind the delegation chiefs. The German party will have only a few feet to walk to its place after entering the room, as the entrance door is located in a corner near the designated position of the enemy representatives.

The forty representatives of the press have been assigned to a place immediately behind the Germans.

Premier Clemenceau was the first of the allied chiefs to visit the scene of the presentation of the peace terms this afternoon. A few minutes after his arrival President Wilson and Premier Lloyd George entered and were introduced by M. Clemenceau to Major Bleuaimé, the officer in charge for the French Government, who showed them over the rooms assigned for the principal session and for subsequent deliberations. All three took a lively interest in the details of the arrangements for the ceremony, suggesting various changes and improvements during the afternoon.

The German delegates in charge of financial affairs waited over from their hotel to meet the Interallied representatives and to continue the discussion of matters which were taken up last Friday.

Five American correspondents will attend the session on Wednesday, and Germany, England, France, Italy, and Japan will each have the same number. The remainder of the correspondents will come from the British colonies and minor powers.

CHINESE EXCITED OVER KIAO-CHAU

Copyright, 1919, by The New-York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PEKING, May 6.—Chinese public opinion is roused over the Peace Conference decision to defer the Kiao-Chau settlement.

Today a mass meeting of returned students passed four resolutions—firstly, to telegraph the Peace Conference pleading for justice and fair treatment for China; secondly, to telegraph the Chinese delegates, urging them not to sign the treaty if it contained conditions unacceptable to China; thirdly, to organize a demonstration to visit the Big Four Legations in Peking anad present a petition for transmission to Paris, and, fourthly, to the Shanghai conference urging delegates to hasten a settlement.

A mass meeting was also held in Central Park, at which similar resolutions were carried.

A body of students this evening attacked Thao Ju-lin's house, smashed windows, wrecked the garage, and finally fired the house. The police were helpless. Thao Ju-lin is a pro-Japanese Minister.

PEKING, May 4 (Associated Press.)—Considerable disquiet prevails here as a result of the receipt of telegrams reporting that the Peace Conference had postponed consideration of China's claim for the return of Tsing-tao. The native press is publishing violent articles leading to a fear of an anti-foreign outbreak.

The Chinese Government on Friday issued a statement to foreign correspondents, explaining that the latest telegrams received from the Chinese delegation stated that the envoys in Paris did not regard the situation with despair. It was stated that the agreement between the Council of Three and Japan would amount virtually to a ratification of the treaty of 1915 forced upon China by Japan.

It was remarked, in conclusion, that if the conditions were repugnant to the Chinese Government and people, and were embodied in the peace treaty, there was a possibility that the Chinese delegates would be instructed not to sign.

FOUR POWERS TO DEAL WITH BELGIUM'S STATUS

Plenipotentiaries to Meet to Frame an Agreement to Replace the Treaty of 1839.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—A cablegram received by the Belgian Information Service today said that plenipotentiaries from Belgium, France, England, and Holland were soon to meet and determine the conditions which would take the place of the Treaty of 1839.

"The attention of the Allies," it was stated by the bureau, "will be called to Belgium's need of military security. The towns of Eupen and Malmédy, handed over to Prussia by the Congress of Vienna, will be returned to the mother country, as also the Forest of Hertogenwald, a portion of which lies in Belgian territory. It is believed, furthermore, that the Walloon district of Moresnet, comprising about two squares miles, which before the war was neutralized and administered jointly by Germany and Belgium, will revert to the latter."

the Legation and returned the money which was confiscated there. It is said that 150,000,000 crowns, for use in Communist propaganda, were found in the building.

Sixteen Hungarians occupied the Legation and refused to move from it, but declare that the money has been hidden away. The anti-Communists say that the money was sent here by Bela Kun and his associates in anticipation of flight from Budapest. The Hungarians in possession of the Legation, who are armed, refuse admission to all comers, including the Vienna police.

BUDAPEST, May 6. (Associated Press.)—Former Food Minister Conbon of the Soviet Government has fled from this city with his family and has joined the counter-revolutionists. Reports state that he declared he abandoned Bolshevism because "Bela Kum acted like a Caesar and would not take advice." Czech forces are reported within twenty miles of this city.

ALLIES TAKE TOWN ON MURMANSK ROAD

Gunboats Reach Fighting Front on the Dvina Near Its Junction with the Vaga.

RED ATTACKS BREAK DOWN

Bolsheviki Force Into Army Sympathizers Who Were Allowed to Leave North Russia.

LONDON, May 6.—Allied troops, advancing southward along the Murmansk railway on Saturday captured Mesalskaya, twenty-five miles south of Urosozero, a War Office announcement says. The Bolsheviki numbered three hundred and had three armored trains. Their resistance was strong.

The announcement continues:

The assault and success of our troops is more praiseworthy because the operation was carried out after a long march and with no artillery assistance. The troops engaged consisted of marines, light infantry, the Slavo-British Legion and small detachments of Canadians, French and Americans. General Maynard says that all the troops showed splendid fighting qualities. Our losses were four killed and four wounded.

Invaluable work has been done by American railway troops in opening up communications. Our outposts pushed south from Mesalsakaya.

ARCHANGEL, May 5, (Associated Press.)—The first of the allied river flotilla reached the fighting front near the junction of the Vaga and Dvina rivers last night. The Bolsheviki shelled the allied positions on the Vaga yesterday afternoon. Other sections of the front are reported quiet.

The gunboats are pushing their way upstream through a river filled with ice, and it will be several days before they can reach the vicinity of Berezanik.

Airplanes report that the Bolshevist fleet on the Dvina in the vicinity of Tulgas has been enlarged considerably. The enemy boats again attempted to approach the American, British, and Russian positions Saturday morning, but were driven off by the land batteries. Yesterday afternoon the enemy shelled the allied positions for six hours with six-inch guns at long range. No damage resulted.

While the river flotilla was attacking on the Dvina on Saturday the Bolshevist field guns, thirty miles westward, bombarded the allied positions on the Vaga at Malo Berezanik. Some Bolshevist craft were sighted on the Vaga Friday afternoon, but withdrew southward without attempting to come up to the allied positions.

On the Vologda railway front on Saturday afternoon Bolshevist infantry, after artillery preparation, attacked the right wing of the allied positions. They were dispersed by rifle fire. A Bolshevist airplane which dropped two bombs harmlessly on the village of Obozerskaya was engaged by allied machine guns and driven off.

Bolshevist sympathizers in Northern Russia who recently were permitted to cross the lines to join the Bolsheviki, met with an unexpected situation, according to the Russki Siever of Archangel. In crossing the Bolshevist territory the men were locked up in a barn until they were able to convince the Bolshevist officers that they were actually Bolsheviki. Commissioner Kuzmah, the Bolshevist commander on the northern front, then arranged a formal reception. In welcoming the newcomers, he said:

"Such conscientious comrades as you are more precious than gold to the Bolsheviki, and, therefore, the Red Army will be happy to see you in its victorious ranks."

The newcomers loudly protested that they did not come to fight. They finally received a furlough of three weeks, after which they will have to join the Bolshevist army on this front.

CHANGES IN RUSSIA EXPECTED IN PARIS

Military Situation of Reds on All Fronts Is Considered as Very Precarious.

PARIS, May 5. (Associated Press.)—Specialists on Russian subjects attached to various allied delegations at the Peace Conference expect decided changes in the Russian situation within the next few weeks.

The Finnish military movement which has been threatening Petrograd and which has been shrouded with mystery is now well defined. General Udenitch and 4,000 Russians operating with him have the support of the Finnish Government and troops and have recruited large numbers of Russian peasants who have become tired of Bolshevist requisitions. General Udenitch has occupied Petroz Avodsk, Olonets and Ladoinoe Pole, east of Lake Ladoga, and thus controls the southern end of the Kola Railway. The escapé of the Bolsheviki operating against allied forces in the Kola Peninsula has been made impossible, and communication between the Moscow Government and the Murman coast has been cut.

Under the direction of General Udenitch and the leaders of the Finnish troops there, the residents of the Karelia district are apparently preparing to launch a movement looking to their annexation to Finland. This would give Finland the Kola Railway and a northern outlet to the Arctic. The Russian committee working for a united Russia here is decidedly unfavorable to such a step and is trying to block it.

Many persons believe the Entente Powers are encouraging the Udenitch movement, which is threatening Petrograd so seriously that the Bolsheviki are evacuating the city. If Udenitch should occupy Petrograd, the revictualing of the city by the Allies would be easy, and the apparent abandonment of the Nansen plan of revictualing Petrograd under neutral auspices is regarded as an indication that the Entente expects the Bolsheviki soon to be forced to withdraw to Moscow.

Admiral Kolchak's Siberian army continues its movement westward toward the Volga, and it is expected that the cities of Viatka and Samara will fall into their hands soon. The Bolshevist forces there are apparently incapable of checking the orderly, well-organized advance from the east. With Kolchak threatening the valley of the Volga and Udenitch menacing Petrograd; with Kiev in the hands of the anti-Bolshevist troops, and with Kolchak's northern army moving rapidly toward the line of communication between Moscow and Archangel, the Bolshevist military situation seems extremely precarious.

Disregarding the recommendations of M. Zinovieff, Governor of Petrograd, Nikolai Lenin, the Russian Bolshevist Premier, recently has been releasing virtually all political prisoners there in an effort to show that the Government is becoming more tolerant. One result of this step, it is believed by specialists here, may be to produce a leader who will ultimately organize the opposition to the present régime.

Dispatches received here from Ekaterinodar state that General Denekin and his high command have issued a statement of their principles for the information of the Entente Powers. They say their purpose is to overthrow Bolshevist anarchy and then work for a reunited Russia by calling a People's Assembly on the basis of universal suffrage.

They favor the decentralization of power, regional autonomy, and the greatest amount of local self-government possible. They also guarantee full religious and civil liberty, favor the passage of labor laws protecting the working classes against exploitation, and state their desire for the immediate enactment of land reforms to "satisfy the needs of the laboring population."

MARTENS NOT RECOGNIZED.

State Department Warns That It Has Not Received Alleged Envoy.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Formal announcement was made today by the State Department that it had not recognized L. A. Martens, now at New York, as a representative of the Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic.

The Russian Embassy was notified by cable today that Prince Lvoff and other members of the Russian delegation at Paris had issued an announcement that the national authorities of non-Bolshevist Russia would not recognize any concessions granted to foreigners by the Bolshevist leaders. The announcement is signed by Prince Lvoff, Sazonoff, Tschaikovsky, and Maklakoff, and is in harmony with the announcement made by the State Department on April 27 that Americans should not accept concessions from the Bolshevist Government, because such concessions would not be binding on future Governments in Russia.

"The department feels it to be its duty to inform the public that Mr. Martens has not been received or recognized as the representative of the Government of Russia or of any other Government," said the announcement. "As the United States Government has not recognized the Bolshevist régime at Moscow as a Government, extreme caution should be exercised as to representations made by any one purporting to represent the Bolshevist Government."

REDS KILL 400 IN MOSCOW.

Suppress Anti-Bolshevist Outbreak by Hungry Crowds.

LONDON, May 6.—Four hundred persons were killed in Moscow last week when the Red Guard was called upon to disperse rioters, says an Exchange Telegraph dispatch quoting advices from East Germany.

The casualties resulted when crowds assembled demanding food and shouting "Down with Lenin and Trotsky!"

COURTESY IN FRANCE SURPRISES GERMANS

Correspondents Tell "Home Folks" of Polite Reception at Versailles.

IMPRESSED BY DEVASTATION

One Philosophically Records Unfriendliness Manifested in the War-Wasted Areas.

By GEORGE RENWICK.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, May 3.—German newspapers publish long dispatches from those special correspondents who have accompanied the peace delegation to Versailles. On the whole, the correspondents appear to be just a little surprised that they were received with such tact and politeness as was shown to them on their arrival, and most of them pay tribute to the correct official reception given to the delegates and journalists. The journalists one and all were mightily impressed by what they saw on their way through devastated regions of Belgium and France.

"That experience," declares the correspondent of the Vossische Zeitung, "was valuable, and throws a clearer light on many things than a hundred conference sittings and a hundred speeches could possibly do. Whole towns have gone. It is a dead land. Even the vegetation has perished. The trees are splintered to matchwood. Naturally we were given no friendly welcome by those towns. Many a bitter word was thrown at us; many a fist was clenched. But most of the people were silent. But who can be angry on account of that? Who can find, in that, proof of an undying chauvinistic attitude? Those people have suffered terribly, and who can be enraged to hear them now curse the enemy?"

But several of the correspondents, of course, cannot avoid repeating their paltry well-worn old wartime phrases about "those French towns which have suffered so much from English artillery fire."

The Vorwärts correspondent was struck by the smart way in which the allied soldiers saluted their officers. "For us Germans, now a curious sight," he mourns. But amid the ruins he was astonished to see the work of restoration going on. That recalls to his mind "Germany's own terrible misery, which will be all the greater because we have lost our faith in our own strength."

The white bread and plentiful food provided at meal times surprised them, too, but they add that the thoughts of conditions at home made this unaccustomed food lose much of its savor.

All the correspondents admit that the German prisoners they saw en route looked well fed and well clad. They dwell, too, on the lighter side of things: How those dispatches they send by courier from Versailles to Berlin by a Herr von Bismarck; how two small "type Fräulein" got into trouble for going out of bounds to buy tempting pastry; how good the cigarettes are, and so on. And one of them takes it as the highest flattery when he is told: "But the Germans give bigger tips than even the Americans do."

KAHN WILL PROPOSE UNIVERSAL SERVICE

Bill for Volunteer Army of 100,000 Also Announced by Congressman in France.

Copyright, 1919, by the Chicago Tribune Co.

PARIS, May 6.—Representative Kahn announced today on returning from observations throughout France, Belgium, and occupied Germany, that he would introduce bills to the House Committee on Military Affairs for an army of 100,000 volunteers and for universal military service. Modeled on the Swiss plan, this would call to the colors all boys of eighteen years for six months from April to October. Representative Kahn is opposed to drafting men for a standing army.

"Universal training, I am thoroughly convinced, is essential to our safety," said Representative Kahn. "The world has seen enough of the American soldier to realize he is not to be tampered with."

are returning to Paris in order not to split the Allies and to show complete union before the enemy delegation. It would be hazardous to predict anything, but we record with great satisfaction the first step toward the ending of dissension, the gravity of which was apparent to everybody."

BASIS OF ACCORD SEEN IN BALFOUR LETTER

PARIS, May 6.—The note sent by Premier Orlando to Paris on Sunday night from Rome indicated an intention to treat with the other powers on the basis of the letter drawn up by Arthur J. Balfour, British Foreign Secretary, which Premiers Clemenceau and Lloyd George handed to him on the eve of his departure from Paris, according to "Pertinax" in the Echo de Paris today.

The Italians, says this writer, will agree to make certain sacrifices in Dalmatia so as to attain their object; "the acquisition of Fiume, even should they have recourse to those transitory formulae which the League of Nations has furnished to the peace treaty."

No actual compromise of the Adriatic problem has been arranged with the Italian delegates, so far as is known here. The fact that they are returning, however, is regarded as encouraging.

Members of the Italian delegation now in Paris stated that dispatches in German newspapers suggesting that Italy had broken with the Entente had made it imperative for the Italians to demonstrate that they were still loyal to the Allies. In this connection, it was noted, Marquis Imperiali, the Italian Ambassador at London, represented Italy at the meeting of the Organization Committee of the League of Nations yesterday.

The Paris newspapers generally express satisfaction with the decision of the Italian delegates to be present on Wednesday when the Peace Treaty is delivered to the Germans. They look upon the action of the Italians as a sign of solidarity among the Allies and say that their return will baffle any German manœuvre to cause dissension among the Five Great Powers. The belief is held that Italy will help in finding ways and means for a satisfactory solution of the Adriatic problem.

RELIEF FELT IN ROME AT ORLANDO'S RETURN

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, May 6.—The departure of Premier Orlando and Foreign Minister Sonnino for Paris is greeted in political and diplomatic circles and the press as a sign that the allied and associated powers recognize just Italian aspirations in the Adriatic.

Everybody here has received with satisfaction the news that the momentarily strained feeling between President Wilson and the Italian delegation may soon be removed through the invitation sent by the Paris Conference asking the Italians to be present at the signing of peace.

The Giornale d'Italia says:

"The departure of the Italian delegation demonstrates the good-will and desire of the allied and associated powers to find a prompt and just solution of our problem. Having, therefore, full confidence in the spirit which dictated the courteous invitation, we formulate the hope that the sojourn of our delegates in Paris will give the result which the Italian people unanimously expect."

LONDON, May 6.—It was not until Tuesday afternoon that the censor allowed the newspapers to refer to the return of Premier Orlando and Foreign Minister Sonnino to Paris, says a Central News dispatch from Rome.

Stubborn Women
That song "I Want What I Want When I Want It" should have been about women.
A man who ventures to ask for a new wrinkle in a man's shop is perhaps told—"We do not carry it."
Then man-like he urges his wishes haltingly and nine times out of ten accepts a compromise.
Not so with a woman—she states what she desires, outglares the saleswoman, and, perhaps nothing loth, seeks elsewhere for just what she wants.
The average woman loves to shop.
The man may pay the bills, but the woman does the shopping.
If you create a desire for your goods with a woman, she can be counted on to keep after them until she gets them.

URGES MIGHTY PUSH BY RAINBOW DIVISION

Most of Committees Far Below Their Quotas, Chairman Colgate Points Out.

STANDING SHOWN IN LIST

Subscriptions Now Total $240,357,830, but This Is Nearly Two-thirds Behind Goal Set."

In a statement issued yesterday, Craig Colgate, Chairman of the Advisory Trades Committee, supervising the drive of the Rainbow Division of Victory Loan workers, urged every member of the organization to make a supreme effort during the next few days. The Rainbows yesterday reported $20,357,900 of subscriptions, making a total of $240,357,830 in subscriptions since the campaign began, and Mr. Colgate pointed out that they were still nearly two-thirds behind their quota. He said:

"With 64 per cent. of its quota to be raised in the final four days of the Victory Liberty Loan campaign, the Rainbow Division has a tremendous task before it. The progress of the drive to date has been somewhat of a disappointment.

"Every Chairman, every committeeman, and every one engaged in industrial activities in Greater New York has a heartfelt interest in the success of the Rainbow Division's campaign. The supreme effort of every one associated with the committee must be made in these few remaining days if the Rainbow Division is to reach and pass its goal.

"I have had a list of the committees prepared showing the percentages reached by the various subdivisions up to May 5. I hope that the disparity between the achievements of certain of these committees with the showing of the leaders will inspire the laggards to such an extent that when the final accounts are published they will not be found wanting."

The list of committees and their percentages, which follow, show that while five of the committees have exceeded their quotas nearly two-thirds of the organization's sub-divisions are below the 50 per cent. mark:

About 3,000 workers in the meat industry of Greater New York attended a smoker organized by the Meats and Meat Products Committee, J. C. Good, Chairman, held in the Harlem Casino, 100 West 116th Street, last night. Leo P. Biegan and Corporal Hallahan, author of "You Know Me, Al," the 27th Division Show, were the speakers.

PLUMED PARADE STIRS CROWDS ON FIFTH AVE.

Fifth Avenue last evening, from Twelfth Street to Fiftieth Street, was ablaze with red illuminations, lighting the way of 5,000 marchers who opened the Red Feather campaign for the Victory Loan. Red feathers adorned the hat of every marcher in the procession, and painted plumes nine feet high were carried. The red feather signifies the purchase of more than one Victory Note, and every one who buys additional notes from today to the last day of the campaign will be entitled to wear one.

The parade was headed by Governor Alfred E. Smith, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Martin Vogel, Internal Revenue Collector William H. Edwards, and Governor Benjamin Strong of the Federal Reserve Bank. Starting at Twelfth Street at 8 o'clock the marchers went up the avenue and turning over to Victory Way dispersed at 9:30. "Big Bill" Edwards delivered an address to the throng on the trophy lined esplanade. Governor Strong and Mr. Vogel jumped into automobiles, which were awaiting them, and made a whirlwind circuit of Manhattan, speaking at different loan meetings.

Collector Edwards made a strong appeal for the speedy purchase of Victory Notes. "It is your duty," he said, "your personal duty, to buy notes; to buy Victory Notes to the very limit of your resources. You cannot dodge the issue. It is squarely up to you. When a man dodges his military duty, we call him a slacker. When a man dodges his supplementary military duty—that of buying Victory Notes—he is a slacker just as bad, every bit of it."

The parade was by civilians, with a touch of the military in the naval and army bands. In line were representatives of the Liberty Loan Committee, the Women's Committee, the Internal Revenue Office, Advisory Trades, political organizations, labor organizations, the Theatrical Loan Division, and foreign language organizations.

Preceding the parade members of the Loan Committee distributed sparklers to the spectators. One of these sparklers set fire to decorations in pine trees near the rostrum on Victory Way as the parade was passing through Fiftieth street, and firemen were called. Other trees at Forty-sixth Street also caught fire, but they were put out without the aid of the fire engines.

One of the features of the parade was a float drawn by two horses, bearing a red feather forty-nine feet long. Every marcher had a red feather, as did the policemen who rode with the police escort. Hundreds of signs were carried by the men with such pleas as: "Are you a Yank?" Invest." "Finish the job with a Red Feather." "This is Red Feather Day—Invest."

Jewish organizations conducted the rally at Victory Way. The speakers in addition to Collector Edwards were Rabbi Stephen S. Wise and Nathan Straus.

BROOKLYN LEADS IN LOAN.

Unofficial Figures Show Borough Has Oversubscribed Quota.

With only $6,000,000 needed to fill its quota, Brooklyn is leading all the boroughs of the city in the Victory Loan campaign. Unofficial figures show the borough to have gone over the top and to have raised the $60,000,000 allotment, but official totals compiled yesterday showed that only $53,120,350 had been obtained so far.

Bank of Coney Island	$220,200
Corn Exchange Bank	5,544,250
Homestead Bank	250,000
Mechanics' Bank	5,547,450
Montauk Bank	50,000
North Side Bank	1,564,800
State Bank	500,000
First National Bank	1,701,050
Greenpoint National Bank	250,000
Nassau National Bank	3,186,750
National City Bank	1,185,900
People's National Bank	183,700
Public National	25,550
Brooklyn Trust Co.	7,000,000
Franklin Trust Co.	2,063,200
Hamilton Trust Co.	3,652,400
Irving Trust Co.	462,150
Kings County Trust Co.	4,721,000
Lawyers Title and Trust Co.	931,000
Manufacturers' Trust Co.	7,500,000
People's Trust Co.	5,500,000
Title Guarantee and Trust Co.	2,261,100
Total	$53,120,350

Besides rallies that were held all over the borough, at 9 o'clock last night searchlights illuminated the sky as silent appeals for the Victory drive. The Red Feather campaign will be resumed today from the steps of Borough Hall, where a mass meeting has been planned for noon. A concert will be given by the Bay Ridge Naval Station Band, and 1,500 bluejackets will be on hand to go through the manoeuvres to stimulate interest in the drive.

PAST $2,000,000,000 IN DRIVE FOR LOAN

SLOWNESS A BIG PUZZLE

Treasury Experts Are Unable to Explain Condition—"Match the Navy!" Is Today's Slogan.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—The $2,000,000,000 mark has been passed by the nation in its race toward the $4,500,000,000 Victory Liberty Loan goal which must be reached by Saturday night. Subscriptions officially reported to the Treasury tonight amounted to $2,060,742,000, or 45.79 per cent. of the amount sought.

Subscriptions by districts and percentages of quotas were announced by the Treasury as follows:

District.	Subscriptions.	Per'tage.
St. Louis	$142,522,000	73.1
Minneapolis	100,806,000	84.1
Chicago	370,500,000	58.7
Boston	197,500,000	52.6
Kansas City	92,241,000	47.8
Richmond	99,228,000	47.2
New York	657,200,000	41.2
Atlanta	58,570,000	40.6
Cleveland	183,113,000	40.4
Philadelphia	229,731,000	34.5
San Francisco	102,654,000	30.0
Dallas	27,613,000	29.2

The increase in the total during the last twenty-four hours was $256,000,000, of which $146,000,000 came from the New York district alone. This is a better record than had been made in the last few days, but falls short of the $622,000,000 average daily subscriptions which must be piled up in the remainder of the week if the loan is to be subscribed fully.

At the corresponding time of the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign bond sales amounted to $3,795,000,000 or 46.64 per cent. of the total.

Tomorrow will be Navy Day throughout the country, and committees everywhere hope to make it a banner day with the slogan "Watch the Navy." The fruits of the day's work will not be known for two or three days. Special naval demonstrations have been arranged at many sea and lake ports.

"Experts who have been associated with all the loan campaigns are at an absolute loss to explain the slowness of subscriptions," said the Treasury's review otnight. "The belief held by many of them at the outset of the loan, that its attractive features, both as to interest and maturity, would cause an early oversubscription has been rapidly dissipated, and yet no one seems to be able to assign a cause for this situation.

Following are official reports by district subdivisions:

St. Louis District—St. Louis County, $1,440,000; Indiana, $13,073,000; Kentucky, $22,989,000; Tennessee, $12,265,000; Mississippi, $8,285,000; Arkansas, $14,116,000; Missouri, $22,616,000; Illinois, $16,691,000; St. Louis City, $29,045,000.

Richmond District—Maryland, $25,407,000; District of Columbia, $10,778,000; Virginia, $26,094,000; West Virginia, $5,158,000; North Carolina, $12,412,000; South Carolina, $4,465,000.

New York District—New York State, $514,648,000; New Jersey, $37,962,000; Connecticut, $4,651,000; New York City, $411,480,000.

Philadelphia District—Philadelphia, $34,751,000; Eastern Pennsylvania, outside of Philadelphia, $57,066,000; Southern New Jersey, $10,498,000; Delaware, $7,415,000.

San Francisco District—Arizona, $1,005,000; Idaho, $4,589,000; Nevada, $995,000; Oregon, $19,941,000; Utah, $5,989,000; Washington, $19,400,000; California, $61,500,000; Hawaii, $4,037,000.

Dallas District — Texas, $24,427,000; Arizona, $485,000; Louisiana, $1,835,000; New Mexico, $748,009; Oklahoma, $135,000.

Atlanta District—Mississippi and Louisiana, $17,000,000 each; Alabama, $5,751,000; Florida, $6,951,000; Georgia, $6,574,000; Tennessee, $12,128,000.

Chicago District—Cook County, $69,095,000; Illinois, outside of Cook County, $40,572,000; Indiana, $29,340,000; Iowa, $56,726,000; Michigan, $33,670,000; Wisconsin, $41,931,000.

The United States steamship Calhoun, the navy "Victory Ship," reported today that it was slowly steaming through the Caribbean, while waiting for the nation's subscriptions to the loan to warrant it getting under full steam for the last four days of the campaign. The position of the ship tonight is such as will make possible the completion of the trip by Saturday night if subscriptions are made rapidly.

REDFIELD CALLS LOAN A SACRED OBLIGATION

Addresses Meeting of German-Americans—Audience Pledges $6,202,750 in Subscriptions.

Secretary of Commerce William C. Redfield was the chief speaker at a Victory Loan mass meeting of Americans of German origin which was held last night at Carnegie Hall. Other speakers were Colonel John A. Hughes, an overseas veteran of the United States Marine Corps, and Ludwig Nissen, Chairman of the Liberty Loan Committee Associates. Major Gen. Leonard Wood sent a letter regretting his inability to be present and expressing the hope that there would be a generous support for the Victory Loan.

The meeting was rather sparsely attended, not more than 500 persons being present, and it was a full hour after the time announced that the meeting was called to order by William Forster, President of the Liederkranz Club. Lack of numbers was made up for by the enthusiasm of those present, who applauded every mention of the exploits of American soldiers on the battlefields of France.

As a preliminary to the meeting, and while an army band was playing "The Star-Spangled Banner," two detachments of sailors of German extraction filed down the side aisles and ascended the platform. They were followed by a detachment of soldiers carrying the colors.

Chairman Nissen announced that before the meeting began $6,202,750 had been subscribed to the loan by persons in the audience, either on behalf of themselves or organizations represented by them. Among the largest subscriptions included in this total were those of Henry Heide, $100,000; George Ehret, $100,000; Henry C. Zoro, $50,000; Central Savings Bank, formerly the German Savings Bank, $2,000,000; Guardian Life Insurance Company of America, formerly the German Life Insurance Company, $500,000; the Lager Beer Brewers' Board of Trade of New York and Vicinity, $200,000; Hamburg Savings Bank, $200,000; Lincoln Savings Bank of Brooklyn, formerly the German Savings Bank, through Charles Froeb, its President, $1,000; German-American Societies, $850,000; L. F. Dommerich & Co., $300,000, and Deieris, Burhler & Co., $100,000.

Secretary Redfield began his remarks by paying a tribute to his fellow-citizens of German birth, saying: "The contribution that German science, German literature, German music, and other forms of German thought and activity have made to the world are so real and vital a part of the best life of the world as to emphasize the fact which seems to me fully clear, that serious as were the offenses against mankind on the part of those who until recently were the ruling powers in Germany, their offenses have been even greater against the spirit of Germany itself.

Men's CORDOVAN Low Shoes

but don't go by the price!

Don't judge these Cordovans by $8 standards, for they're much better. The leather is not only Cordovan, it's the only Cordovan! the genuine shell Cordovan! the Cordovan that counts! And the model and the making, and the finish and the fit, and the character and the comfort, are a revelation at the price.

"Our Statements State Facts"

JULIUS SHAPIRO, Office Mgr., The Diamond Shoe Co., 196 Church Street, New York City

"Our customers like these statements because they don't have to examine every item with a microscope—they know the figures are computed by a machine that doesn't make mistakes in addition or subtraction.

"Absolute accuracy in statements is alone worth the cost of a Burroughs Bookkeeping Machine.

And They're All in the Mail When They Ought To Be

"That's another big point. Prompt statements certainly speed up collections and represent service that pays a profit.

"What's more it spells efficiency in a vitally important department and that means better work at less expense.

"Our machine has saved at least one clerk and ended our trial balance troubles, in addition to getting out our statements."

When the Burroughs representative calls on you, be sure to get all the information out of him that you can. It will be well worth your time.

ungrudgingly paying the debt to the men who died in France and for the things which have already been expended," said Mr. Remick. "National self-respect requires that we promptly and cheerfully loan to the Government this $4,500,000,000. Compare our total war loan of about $21,000,000,000 to England's $30,000,000,000 raised during the havoc of war, when our total wealth is $250,000,000,000 to England's $100,000,000,000.

"The Victory notes must be sold to individuals. If the banks are obliged to take them, essential credits will be restricted and business impeded. The Secretary of the Treasury is confronted with a task greater perhaps than any that his predecessor had to face, because it must be undertaken without glamor. He has the right, therefore, to rely upon the members of the Exchange to stand the test of character and to respond with even greater determination than when the bands were playing and the boys going to France.

"Victory notes are an ideal investment and can be offered to clients of all types in the confidence that they will show little or no depreciation, and must, in the course of time, sell at a premium. Every subscription benefits the buyer, benefits the Government, and hastens the return to normal business and unrestricted credit."

An encouraging feature of the totals was the news that the man on the street seemed to be waking up to his responsibility in the Victory Loan. Booths all over the city showed a decided jump in subscriptions, the workers reporting that they were getting responses to their appeals from passersby, where heretofore it has been hard to arouse any interest in the notes.

One of the banner booths of the Loan organization is at Fifth Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street under Mrs. B. M. Simon and Miss E. Sachs. This booth has a total to date of $1,340,000 worth of subscriptions.

Subscriptions amounting to $13,028,350 were announced by Joseph Hartigan, manager of the Foreign Language Bureau of the Liberty Loan Organization of the Second Federal Reserve District. Mr. Hartigan's figures were compiled from reports made up to last Sunday night by Racial Committees. The committees alphabetically arranged and their totals are:

Employes of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad reported yesterday to the Liberty Loan Committee that they had subscribed a total of $2,086,550 to the Victory Liberty Loan. There are 22,629 employes, and of that number 21,831, or 97 per cent., had made subscriptions.

The Police Department loan drive brought a total of $5,200,000. Fourth Deputy Commissioner Frederick A. Wallis, who is directing the campaign, said that from now on the uniformed police of New York will be note sellers. They will make a house-to-house canvass by precincts, each Captain striving to get a high total in the $50,000,000 quota which the police have undertaken to raise.

REDS HUNTED DOWN IN CALMING MUNICH

Levine, Sondheimer, and Other Leaders of Uprising Are Shot Summarily.

FETE FOR CITY'S RESCUE

250 Dead Are Counted — Bavarian Army, Found Unreliable, to be Disbanded.

MUNICH, May 5, (Associated Press.)—All the newspapers appeared today except the Communist, the Red Flag and other radical organs. Cash and other valuables deposited in banks have been found intact for the most part.

Sondheimer, the anarchist leader, was shot while trying to escape.

No trace has been found of the Communist leaders Nissen and Levien. Levine, the editor of the Red Flag, was shot summarily. Two hundred and fifty bodies have been taken from the medical institute to various cemeteries.

All Munich celebrated the victory over the Soviet Government yesterday. The streets were crowded with people who cheered the passing troops or gave them refreshments.

Captured Sparticides were hooted as they were escorted to the streets. Bands played national airs outside the captured palace and the crowds sang patriotic anthems.

The presence of armed peasants was noticeable in the streets, and 800 Austrians who fought with the German Government troops to regain the city were heartily cheered.

The citizens were busy during the day tearing down placards vilifying the Prussians. This work they did the more willingly because General von Möhl, the Bavarian commander, made a statement that it was the North Germans who assisted largely in freeing the city and that they were entitled to the gratitude of the entire population instead of the hatred which had been worked up against them.

The Bavarian War Ministry will be transferred from Bamberg to Munich. A resolution dissolving the Bavarian Army will be adopted by the Cabinet because of the poor work done by the Bavarian troops during the troubles in this city.

5,000 Arrested in Munich.

BERLIN, May 5, (Associated Press.)—One hundred and fifty persons were killed or executed during the fighting at Munich, according to an account of the fall of that city printed in the Lokal Anzeiger.

Among the killed was Herr Toller, Diretor of the Soviet Government. Herr Seidl, who was said to have instigated the shooting of hostages, was beaten to death by Württemberg soldiers, it is said.

The Tageblatt states that 5,000 arrests have been made in Munich, the prisoners including Dr. Levien, leader of the Bavarian Independent Socialists, and Town Governor Weber.

It is confirmed that among the identified dead are Countess Heila von Westarp, daughter of Count Adolf Westarp, who was born in Munich in 1885, and one of the Princes of the House of Thurn and Taxis, believed to be Gustave, who was born at Dresden in 1888.

THREE DAYS OF RED TERROR IN MUNICH

Height of Civil War and Murder Reached by Desperate Communists.

By GEORGE RENWICK.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, May 3.—Communism is dying bitterly and desperately in Munich. That beautiful city during the last three days has been a theatre of civil war and murder to an extent not yet witnessed anywhere else in Germany, since defeat let loose the rebel forces of disorder.

All last night and during this forenoon street fighting still raged and angry battle scenes were enacted in the center of the city. Direct communication with Munich has been until now impossible, but numerous messages I have received from my correspondent at Bamberg give, when put together, a graphic picture of the events of the past three days.

On Wednesday evening the Hoffmann Government received a communication from the new Communist Executive in Munich proposing negotiations on the basis of a suspension of hostilities.

The Hoffmann Government replied, declaring it could agree to nothing and must have complete surrender. As no reply was forthcoming to that, orders were given for the final advance on the city, to begin from all sides.

During Thursday the Red Guard posts scattered around Munich were driven in with comparative ease, but the peculiar nature of the struggle is shown by the fact that several places had to be taken and retaken several times. Discharge and Pasing, for instance, have been reported occupied three times. That is accounted for by the fact that when the Government forces occupied a place and passed on forward Red Guards appeared behind them again and resumed possession.

Early Thursday afternoon the first contingent of the Government troops entered the city's outskirts. It was the Regensberg People's Defense Corps under Lieutenant Saegmueller, which forms a part of General Syebert's Bavarian Volunteer Corps. It came from the northeast and very shortly afterward Wurttemburg and Baden troops were entering the western suburbs under fairly considerable rifle and machine gun fire. Forces from other directions, including Prussians from the north, were soon within the city's outskirts and being subjected to intermittent fire, chiefly from housetops.

It was in the northern part of the city that most of Thursday's fighting took place, and that toward evening became exceedingly bitter. Street after street had to be cleared of Red Guards, and at some places it was a case of taking every house separately. Here and there small bands of Spartacides were trapped, though a goodly number laid down their arms and tore off their red armbands.

Wherever they found opportunity small bands of bourgeois joined the Government troops and took part in the fighting. By about 6 o'clock the main suburb had been largely cleared of Red Guard forces, though sniping continued almost everywhere. Up to that time the losses on both sides, so far as could be ascertained, were fifty killed and a large number wounded.

General Syebert's Corps had fought especially hard and successfully. Before nightfall it had taken 100 prisoners, four guns, and thirteen machine guns. A contingent under Major Deetyern captured Herr Landauer, the notorious Spartacide leader, in the house of Kurt Eisner's widow, and this force also took the Spartacide aerodrome, the machines in which all had been so badly damaged by bombardment that none of the Communist leaders was able to escape by air as had been contemplated.

With darkness the fighting was resumed all around the narrowing circle formed by the incoming troops, and the night was one of terror and alarm, the inhabitants being forced to take refuge in cellars, while all around them rifles and machine guns rattled. At midnight a pause took place in the struggle for the mastery of the city, but yesterday morning fighting again was resumed. Meanwhile Herr Egelhofer, commander of the Red Guards, had issued a fiery proclamation.

"The enemy is at the doors of the city," it read. "Not an hour is to be lost. Suspend all work and seize your weapons. Fight to the last for everything is at stake."

In the early hours of the forenoon a minor civil war broke out inside the cordon of Government troops. Officers, students and soldiers true to the Hoffman Government began to attack red guards in several important public buildings, and they managed to occupy and put in a state of defence the Town Hall, the Palace and several other places, but the red guards appear to have retaken the Palace later in the day.

During the day the Government troops gradually forced their way forward, machine gun and artillery fire doing great damage in many streets. When night fell, the Spartacides were still solidly united and in possession of the palace, all the barracks in the centre of the city, the police presidency, and houses connecting and round about those points as well as of the station and the bridges over the railway and several large buildings nearby, including the vast Marthoefer Brewery.

BERLIN MOBS DEFEND VENDORS OF LOOT

One Person Killed and Four Wounded When the Police Raid Illegal Traffickers.

BERLIN, May 5, (Associated Press.)—Policemen clashed today with salesmen who were engaged in vending stolen goods, four policemen being wounded and one civilian killed.

The fight resulted from a raid on the salesmen. As the police advanced a crowd opened fire on them with revolvers. A company of soldiers was sent to the aid of the police.

The police captured nine salesmen who had in their possession a thousand illegal food cards and a large quantity of stolen property. Mobs which attempted to rescue the prisoners were driven off.

Troops Called in German Food Riots.

LONDON, May 6.—There have been serious food riots at Stralsund, Pomerania, says an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Berlin. Troops were summoned and several persons were killed or wounded.

ORDERS CAMPAIGN AGAINST VILLA

Carranza, Alarmed by Bandit's Strength, Tells Castro to Take Field Immediately.

JUAREZ, Mexico, May 6.—Alarmed at Francisco Villa's recent show of strength in northern Mexico, President Carranza has ordered General Jesus Augustin Castro, sub-Secretary of War in command of the Northeastern Zone, to begin a campaign against Villa's forces immediately, according to reports brought to the border tonight by passengers from Chihuahua City.

General Castro has ordered the 57th Infantry Regiment, under Colonel Augustin Mora, to take the field against Villa and Colonel Mora and his command left here today for the State capital. Another report was that General Francisco Murguia, former commander of the zone, had been ordered north to command a column against Villa. He divides honors with General Obregon as a commander who has defeated Villa in battle.

Men of the Seventy-Seventh Division Make Their Last March As Soldiers of Liberty

HONOR THE FALLEN IN COURT OF DEAD

Mayor, Governor, and Draft Boards Lay Wreaths in Memory of the 77th's Heroes.

STAGE IMPOSING CEREMONY

Veterans of Civil and Spanish-American Wars Join in Tribute as Survivors March By.

While thousands of people on Fifth Avenue were shouting their acclamations to the khaki-clad boys of the 77th Division yesterday, those in the neighborhood of the Public Library at the beginning of the parade stood silently, and, with heads uncovered, paid their tribute to the men who made the supreme sacrifice and are lying under the flowered fields of France.

The most impressive ceremony of the day was held at Forty-first Street, where the Court of the Heroic Dead, with its purple net curtain bearing the names of the battles in which the division had fought so valiantly, became the resting place of two large wreaths of flowers. One, the gift of the city, was placed by Mayor Hylan and Governor Smith, and the other, presented by the Local Draft Boards of the city, was laid alongside the city's tribute by a guard of honor consisting of veterans of the civil and Spanish-American wars.

The Court of the Heroic Dead, with its high pylons, bearing gilt-headed spears and the insignia of other divisions, was erected for the parade of the 27th Division, but the names of the battles on the hall of honor were changed, and in place of St. Mihiel, Mt. Kemmel and Ypres, in which "New York's Own" was engaged, there were Flanders, the Argonne, the Vesle and the Vosges.

Each of these important battle areas was printed in letters of gold, in separate disks on the curtain, and on three columns there were oblong tablets on which were printed, also in gold, twenty-four other skirmishes which tested the heroism of the boys of this city. They were: Neuvilly, Landonvillier, Bois de Hales, Tanneries, Château du Diable, Basoches, Villiers en Prayères, Aisne River, Merval, Blanzy les Fismes, Ravine Marion, Revillion, La Petite Montagne, Bois de la Grurie, Bois de la Naza, Moulin de Charlevaux, La Besogne, St. Juvin, Hill No. 182, Champigneulle, Grand Pré, Harricourt, Montenoy, Raucourt, La Besace and Villers Devant Mouzon. At the top of the curtain was a quotation from the letter sent by Abraham Lincoln to Mrs. Bixby of Boston, who lost her five sons in the civil war. It read:

"I feel how weak and fruitless must be any words of mine which should attempt to beguile you from the grief of a loss so overwhelming. I pray that our Heavenly Father may assuage the anguish of your bereavement and leave you only the cherished memory of the loved and lost and the solemn pride that must be yours to have laid so costly a sacrifice upon the altar of freedom."

189 Wreaths at Roll of Honor.

At the foot of the Roll of Honor were 189 floral wreaths, each bearing a purple mourning sash, upon which was inscribed the number of the Local Draft Board which sent the tribute. Beside the wreath of each board a large display of purple flowers, lying on a palm leaf carried by nine soldiers, was the contribution of the joint boards.

When the gold stars of the division's dead approached the library, the joyful shouts which greeted the miniature Statue of Liberty suddenly ceased, and the veterans of the wars of 1865 and 1898, with their families, who were occupying benches on either side of the avenue between Fortieth and Forty-second Streets, stood, in silent veneration of the boys who went to France with the others and who did not return.

As the cortège of honor arrived at the Court of the Dead, the command of "Column right, march," was given, with the result that all the men for whom the order was meant faced the library. To the mournful notes of the "Gates of Elysium," which was being played by the 13th Field Artillery Band at Fortieth Street, nine gray-haired veterans of the former wars marched to the curb, relieved the soldiers of the flowers and the green pole upon which they were borne, and placed them upon the steps under the Roll of Honor. A broad purple ribbon attached to the wreath bore in Latin the words "Usque ad mortem et ultra," which means "Even unto death and beyond." On another sash there was "Div. LXXVII. A. E. F."

In the Guard of Honor were four members of the Grand Army of the Republic, John Stack, James R. Silliman, Robert Forfar and William Harry. The Spanish War Veterans were Depart. Com. Thomas F. Gannon and Adjutant A. E. Stern, and two Confederates were W. S. Kelley, Commander of Confederate Veterans, and Adjt. C. R. Hatton. After placing the Draft Boards' tribute between the pylons, the men arranged themselves in V formation and remained in this position throughout the parade.

Mayor and Governor Pay Homage.

Preceding the horse-drawn Statue of Liberty, came the official automobiles. When the first, carrying Mayor Hylan and Gov. Smith, arrived at Forty-first Street, it stopped at the curb-stone and the city and State executive alighted. The next car also stopped, and from it descended Secretary of War Baker, General Barry, commanding the Department of the East; Police Com. Richard Enright and Grover Whalen, Secretary to Mayor Hylan. A third automobile had in it the city's memorial wreath of lavender pansies and black-painted leaves. A purple silken sash flowing from it bore the gold inscription, "Mayor of City of New York. In veneration."

To the tunes of "John Brown's Body" the wreath was carried up the steps, followed by a police Sergeant bearing the city flag. When it had been placed in position, the men boarded the cars, the band struck up a livelier tune, and the people who viewed the ceremony brushed away their tears and swayed rhythmically to the popular songs played by the band of the 13th Coast Artillery, and also by Eben's 71st Regiment Band.

In the park benches on either side of Fifth Avenue, opposite the Library, were seated the veterans of three wars, and the blue and the khaki, interspersed by civilian clothing, was a pretty sight. There was the gray-whiskered veteran of the war with the South, listening with moistened eyes to the tales of the battle in which a wounded doughboy had become injured, and then both of them listening to the glorious tale of some mother, whose boy "had done so much toward beating the Kaiser." The old soldiers of years gone by jumped to their feet when the Stars and Stripes was carried past, and with a look of pride in their eyes, removed their peaked caps and placed them over their hearts. The soldiers in formation in front of the library saluted at this time, and stood at "attention" at all other times.

General Alexander Salutes the Dead.

Cheers went up at the approach of Gen. Robert Alexander, the division commander, who answered by removing his hat and placing his hand at the forehead of a smiling face. The expression on his face changed when he approached the Court of the Dead, and he, too, paid a tribute to the men under his command who had fallen, by turning his head toward the left and coming to a salute. His staff and all the officers thereafter did the same.

When the last automobile of wounded men had passed Forty-second Street, the people, who ordinarily would have rushed out into the mud-gutter to make a hasty departure, stood firm for a few minutes. The Coast Artillery Band had "struck up" the "Star-Spangled Banner," and every person within hearing remained in his place until the last strain had died away.

HEARTFELT OVATION GIVEN TO MARCHERS

Miles of Cheers from Tremendous Throng Accompany Men of the 77th in Parade.

CROWDS SHOWER GIFTS

Soldiers Present Splendid Appearance as They Stride Along Crowd-Lined Avenue.

To the man in the ranks, the march yesterday up Fifth Avenue was one continual ovation from the command "march" to that of "halt." There have been other parades and other crowds, perhaps larger, perhaps noisier, but to one who trudged with the marchers through the enthusiastic multitude, there came the conviction that never was a heartier, more spontaneous or more sincere tribute accorded to a body of men—the ex-clerks, the ex-tailors, the ex-truckmen, the ex-bankers, the ex-professional men, who came back in glory as the 77th Division, seventh in the number of Distinguished Service Crosses awarded, and ninth in the number of its casualties.

New York—and all New York was there—seemed to realize that the swinging columns were of New York wholly, citizen soldiery and not professional soldiers—though they marched like 'em—and for that reason the acclamation was the deeper. So thoroughly did this feeling grip the crowds that when the parade began to file past, the soldiers tramped up a silent lane. But the men soon knew it was not the silence of indifference; it was simply wonderment, a failure to realize that the even lines, the straight shoulders, the proud carriage, belonged to the men who, so short a time before, had slouched into the draft boards and barely passed physical muster.

Striding along 128 paces to the minute, marching block after block without giving even the slightest hint of physical discomfort, the men finished their parade as fresh as when they started. Ruddy cheeked, and with bulging proportions that seemed to be testing the capacity of the Government O. D. uniforms, the vigor of the soldiers was in sharp contrast to the appearance they presented when they trudged down Fifth Avenue, on a snowy day, just before they left the city on their great adventure.

"Tired?" scornfully said a private at the end of the route. "Whatthehell would I be tired for? Those folk on the sidewalk must be, though—they cheered so much! Why, say, buddy, I must have marched a couple of million miles in France, so why let a little thing like this get me worked up. I'm 'boko,' full of pep, and I'll tell the world I feel like pushing over a couple of buildings. Hungry? Oh, that's something else again—even goldfish would taste good right now."

Line Moves on Time.

Promptly at 10 o'clock the parade moved out of Washington Square, Major General Robert Alexander riding ahead on "Captain," a big bay loaned to him by the Traffic Squad. For an hour before the start General Alexander and his staff stationed themselves in Washington Square. There the memorial pylon, topped with violets, symbolic of the dead, was strapped to the shoulders of four soldiers under command of Lieutenant C. F. Seidler. The palm bore this inscription—"Usque Mortem et Ultra. LXXVII. Division, A. E. F., O. D. S. D. D. D."

On the shoulder of the guard to the rear of the palm was a large medallion which read, "Of that liberty for which they gloriously died, we, the living, pledge an inviolable championship." The guard of honor escorting the palm left the starting point before the general parade formation. It was led by the Fire Department band in charge of Drum Major Charles Schubert, a former Spanish War veteran.

Then came the banners displaying the gold stars in memory of the fallen heroes, each banner bearing about 250 stars. Just before the time for starting a wounded belated soldier arrived. He was met by General Alexander. The man, Private Paul Esposito of Company N, 307th Infantry, had had his left leg amputated at the knee and was supporting himself on crutches. General Alexander, his hand on the lad's shoulder, talked with him for a few minutes and then arranged with Police Lieutenant Michael Snyder that Esposito should have a seat in one of the vehicles conveying the wounded.

Fifteen minutes before the start the Mayor's Committee in motor cars passed up University Place and through Tenth Street to Fifth Avenue, and at 10:25 o'clock the units of the division assembled and passed out of the square.

As the parade swung forward up Fifth Avenue, in massed battalions, it resembled a forest of steel moving between two solid walls of persons. General Alexander, at the head of his troops, was cheered by hundreds of thousands. The thoroughfare was in gay dress, every point of vantage was occupied, and the surplus from the thousands along the sidewalks overflowed far into the side streets. Three or more heads appeared over every window ledge, and torn paper streamed from the buildings.

Cheers for Chinese Color Bearer.

At street intersections the police held the crowds in check. Around the Victory Arch they forced the crowds on the east side far across the park, and no one was allowed in Madison Square within 300 feet of the big, white arch. As Brig. Gen. Michael J. Lenihan, the hero of Château-Thierry, rode through the Victory Arch at the head of the 153d Infantry Brigade, the ovation was deafening. General Lenihan, before being assigned to the 77th Division, was head of the 58d Brigade of the Rainbow Division, of which the 69th Infantry was a part.

Another hero who received thunders of cheers from the spectators was Sergeant Sing Kee, Regimental Sergeant Major of the 306th Infantry. Sing Kee, a Chinese, was twice decorated for bravery, and as he came into sight, carrying the regiment's banner, he was greeted again and again.

After the first ripple of applause which swept from Washington Square to the Victory Arch as the marchers swung up on their hike, the crowd appeared to be spellbounded by the magnificent appearance of the soldiers. Occasionally some one would spot a familiar face and call out a name, but aside from that the cheers went only to the regimental colors. This was not true in the "Latin Quarter" between Washington Square and Fourteenth Street—all of Greenwich Village Who's Who seemed to be on hand, and they kept up a continuous din.

Probably the most splendid reception of the entire route was given to the marchers between Forty-second and Fifty-ninth Streets. Especially strong were the cheers for the "lost battalion" of the 308th Infantry. When General Alexander and Lieut. Gen. J. M. McGee, riding ahead, came abreast of St. Patrick's Cathedral, to each was presented a large bouquet of American Beauty roses by Miss Etta Devito and Miss Helen Finn, both of whom wore the Knights of Columbus uniform. Both officers accepted the flowers with a word of thanks and rode on.

Smokes and Sweets for Wounded.

Between Forty-second and Fifty-ninth Streets about 100 Knights of Columbus girls, under the direction of Michael Hogan, the organization's supervisor for this district, were kept on the jump distributing chocolate and cigarettes to the wounded soldiers and sailors seated in chairs and special stands near the Cathedral. Many of these men were former 77th Division soldiers, who were invalided home to recover from wounds received in the Argonne.

It was especially noticeable that the crowd, although most enthusiastic, was exceptionally orderly. Much favorable comment was expressed by the spectators over the methods of the police in handling the overflow.

For fully an hour before the parade reached Fifty-ninth Street, guests of the Hotels Savoy and Netherland amused themselves by throwing boxes of cigarettes and candy from the windows down to wounded men seated along the curbing. Many a box of sweets or smokes was wasted in the scramble, and many of the containers burst when they struck the sidewalk, scattering their contents over the streets. When the 302d Engineers went by the Hotel Netherland friends from upper windows literally rained red carnations upon them. The discipline of the men held strong, and not a single man stopped to recover a gift.

As the soldiers struck into the stretch between Eighty-sixth Street and 100th Street, there seemed to be more individual recognition among the crowds than at the stands on the Colonial calls to the ranks, but for the most part the calls were unheeded. Cries of "Oh, you Sammy!" "Jimmy, here's your mother!" and other words of recognition could not have fallen upon ears more deaf, although here and there a smile would flit across a face as the man showed he had heard.

Marched Like Veterans.

Then came the marchers displaying the colors of the regiments. Each regiment was preceded by a color bearer, and the men marched with the swing of veterans. Behind the colors came the regimental commander, his staff and the band, and then the companies, platoons and squads, with the officers at the head of each unit.

Behind the colors came the regimental commander, his staff and the band, and then the companies, platoons and squads, with the officers at the head of each unit.

Men Marched All Smiling.

Generally the men marched all smiling. Jokes, which the spectators got no hint of, circulated mysteriously through the ranks, producing grins and chuckles. Information about the big artillery in the reviewing stand and concerning points of interest along Fifth Avenue was conveyed by some mystic system of communication, and hundreds of eyes would suddenly focus upon a celebrity in the crowd or on the house of some well-known man.

Practically every marcher was a New Yorker, but many of them had rarely explored the upper reaches of Fifth Avenue except on their march on July 4, 1917, just before they packed for Yaphank, and hundreds of them appeared to take interest in recalling the places which had been pointed out to them on that picturesque sight-seeing jaunt.

In one language or another, nearly every man who marched yesterday had shouts or greeting directed to him personally from the crowd and these were usually acknowledged by a smile and a slight lifting of the rifle. Sometimes a marcher defied martial propriety long enough to wave a hand surreptitiously or to snap back a ventriloquistic greeting, closing his lips with abnormal tightness before a Sergeant's eyes could switch to his direction. And some were even chewing what might have been gum.

Moss's Manual was forgotten occasionally when the marchers took note of a group of unusually pretty girls, which groups were numerous. The precepts of that very serious publication on the duty due from a soldier's eyes were null and void for the time. Thousands of years in the guardhouse were earned, had stern justice been done in the premises. The order of the march follows:

Police escort.
Cortège in honor of the dead.

Cheers for Lost Battalion.

The demonstrations by the crowd were about equally distributed among the units, with the exception that, having heard more about the 1st Battalion of the 308th Infantry, the crowd gave it a special greeting. "The Lost Battalion," as it has been unalterably nicknamed, was with the last section of the parade, but it was identified and cheered enthusiastically for its heroic and successful stand while surrounded in the Argonne.

The band with the 305th stirred the crowd's humor with some grim but amusing touches. One of the big horns, which originally possessed mechanism as complicated as the human anatomy, had been disemboweled by a German shell, but the debris, though dumb, was carried as one of the honored relics of the regiment. Another battle-scarred horn played bravely in the band yesterday, though it had sustained two serious wounds in action. This horn had two wound stripes displayed conspicuously on its bell. Both of these plucky instruments were cheered by the crowd all the way along the avenue.

The crowds, which were much more self-conscious than the soldiers, clearly felt awkward in the heavy military atmosphere and at a loss how to show admiration for brave soldiers who didn't seem to have any taste for lionizing, welcomed any comic relief and made the most of it. It was not until this band came along that the hundreds of thousands of New Yorkers began to feel at home in their own main thoroughfare. Humor and gayety in the ranks of the marchers never reached the proportions of an incident and did not change the severe military character of the spectacle and gave the crowd nothing to seize upon.

Besides the invalided horns, the crowd found an interesting touch of nature in a little black goat, with a cape, the regimental colors, and service stripes, which brought good luck to the 308th, and a Russian wolfhound, "Bang," with the Headquarters Troop. "Bang" was formerly in the service of the Hun, but the wise dog joined the American Army at a point in the Argonne which the boche left too hastily to bother about their four-footed personnel. The bass drum of the 305th Infantry Band was another exhibit of lighter interest, with the well-battered face of a German soldier crying "Kamerad" conspicuous on its business end.

Cheers for the Wounded.

A number of the men of the division recovering from wounds marched after some of the units and were heartily greeted, but the main body of them came after the main parade, some on foot, but most of them in automobiles of the Motor Corps of America, the National League for Woman's Service, and other organizations. Many of the men who were riding had left limbs in France.

The "pep" of the wounded men put new life into the crowds. One of them, balancing himself on his good leg, used his crutch for a baton and directed the band ahead of him, although the players had their backs to him.

Reprehension of those who "put over" prohibition when the soldiers were fighting on the other side was addressed to the crowd by one who struggled to his feet, and stayed there in spite of wounds, to state his convictions on that point. Another shouted for Liberty bonds. One man, dissatisfied with the faint noise in the partially filled benches opposite the official reviewing stand, had his automobile driven over to the curb and shouted: "Make more noise, there. Don't you like us."

There was a lot of handclapping.

"No, no, that's no good," he cried. "Never mind clapping your hands. Shout! Shout!"

There were some shouts, but the soldier rode away shaking his head dissatisfied. But, generally the crowd gave a pretty good account of itself in hailing the wounded men.

One exhibit in the wounded men's section was a half-demolished German ambulance bearing the placard, "Presented by the Kaiser."

Major Gen. Robert Alexander halted when he reached the end of the line at 110th Street and reviewed his men. After the last of them had marched under the arch he said:

"The strong feeling of comradeship and friendship which I have for those men is so deep-seated that I hate like sin to part with them."

General Alexander said he was happy over the day's work, and added:

"The entire parade progressed remarkably well and great credit is due to the citizens of New York that such magnificent order was preserved and also to the police for the part they played.

"The job of the men of the 77th Division is done. They performed their task in a soldierly and workmanlike manner, and now they return to civil life. The time has come to beat the swords into plowshares, and these men will now do as well in civil life as they did for their country in France."

General Alexander's Farewell to the 77th Predicts Loyalty of Men in Civil Life as in War

General Robert Alexander took leave of the 77th Division in the following general order, issued last night:

General Orders No. 35.
From Division Headquarters.

The parade of the 77th Division today virtually concludes the existence of the division as a unit of the United States Army. The division commander deems it appropriate, in saying farewell to the comrades with whom he has been associated during the history-making events of the war and since the armistice, to express to them his high sense of appreciation of the loyalty with which each and all have fulfilled the trust reposed in them.

Whether in the face of the foe in active combat, in the billets in France occupied in the period since the armistice, or out across the Atlantic, and finally in our own home town, the record of the division has been consistently one of faithful service and a high sense of duty on the part of all.

The division commander extends to each and every officer and man of that division his most sincere appreciation of all their soldierly qualities, and wishes one and all every success and happiness in the future, feeling sure that they will display in civil life the same qualities of fortitude and patriotic devotion to duty that they have so fully demonstrated as soldiers.

ROBERT ALEXANDER,
Major General U. S. A., Commanding.

2,000,000 OUT TO SEE VETERANS PASS BY

Only About Half of Great Throng Get Close Enough to Watch 77th Parade.

POLICE HOLD BACK CROWD

14,000 Bluecoats on Hand to Prevent Disorder—Traffic Lines Operated to Full Capacity.

About 1,000,000 persons watched the 77th Division parade yesterday, and almost as many more had only fleeting glimpses of the marching soldiers, because of unusual police strictness. Acting under instructions not to permit a repetition of the unruliness that marred the procession of the 27th Division, the police followed orders almost too well, hundreds of thousands being held away from Fifth Avenue on either side.

Traffic on the city's facilities was exceptionally heavy, but reports indicated that it did not quite reach the figures established when thousands of residents of up-State communities filled the city for the turnout of the ex-National Guardsmen. Police arrangements were in charge of Inspector O'Brien of the Traffic Division, working under the supervision of Deputy Commissioner Lahey. Long before the hour for the parade's start 8,000 members of the regular force, reinforced by 6,000 reservists, were flung along Fifth Avenue from Washington Square to 110th Street, through the side streets, and at intervals along Sixth and Madison Avenues. All east and west traffic was ordered discontinued the moment the parade got under way.

It was early when those bearing tickets to the grandstands began to appear. A steady stream of ticket holders passed through the police lines until 9:30 o'clock, when the police relaxed their lines and the throng that had been waiting for hours swarmed through the side streets to Fifth Avenue. After the curbing of the Avenue had been lined, not more than three and in some places only two deep, the police reformed their lines. Around the Victory Arch, where at the preceding parade the crowd broke through the line in disorder, the police flung a stone-wall defense, which gave way only to an official pass. Back of this line were others along Sixth and Fourth Avenues, where the patrolmen stood shoulder to shoulder and refused approach to Fifth Avenue except upon solemn oath that the individual was bent on transacting business in the prescribed area.

March Through Hollow Square.

Those who filtered through this line eventually drew up at the second, which formed in the side streets fifty feet west of Broadway, in Madison Square Park 100 feet to the rear of the Altar of Liberty, and along Twenty-second and Twenty-eighth Streets. The result was a vast and unpopulated area, three blocks long and nearly two blocks wide, with the Arch of Victory in the centre. Thus, when the boys from the Argonne approached, instead of being compelled to struggle through a forest of humanity, they paraded through a vast hollow square.

The strain of carrying the throng to the parade began to be observed early on the trolley, elevated, and subway lines, and last night a statement by the traction company said the facilities had been operated all day as heavily as they could be. The greatest number of passengers were carried during the usual morning "rush" hours. After the parade there was a heavier homebound traffic over the Brooklyn, Manhattan, and Williamsburg Bridges than any the bridge police recall having seen at such an early hour.

The parade went off without a single serious accident being reported to the police. Along the entire route the spectators were on hand early. Every building had its windows full of spectators, waving flags or thrown out torn paper, candies, fruit, or smokes. Most of the store windows were tenanted by wounded veterans or their relatives, while park benches or chairs were placed at choice sites for men from the convalescents' hospitals.

The reviewing stand of the Knights of Columbus in front of St. Patrick's Cathedral had every seat filled. It had been planned to have Archbishop Patrick J. Hayes review the division from this stand, but in his absence in Philadelphia, Mgr. Michael J. Lavelle, rector of the Cathedral, served.

At Fifty-ninth Street and Fifth Avenue, where the police had the greatest difficulty handling the crowd during the parade of the 27th, they had no trouble yesterday. The throng was kept well back, and there was no denting of the line to throw the paraders out of step.

Bad Day for Speculators.

There were great gaps in the grandstand at Fifty-ninth Street, due to the tardiness of ticketholders to arrive, and when word was received that the parade had started, the police permitted persons standing on the east side of the avenue to cross the street and take places that had been reserved. The Arsenal in Central Park opposite Sixty-fourth Street was crowded, and at one time there were more than 100 persons on the roof of the structure. Along this stretch, the crowd took possession of stoops of private houses, brown stone fence railings and any other points of vantage they could find.

Ticket speculators and private stand profiteers had a bad day. Every inch of the stand put up by the Mayor's Committee at Ninety-seventh and Ninety-eighth Streets, about which court proceedings were threatened, was filled, while the private stand erected by lessees of the vacant lot, who had complained that the municipal stand would interfere with the view of their ticket-holders was almost deserted.

Speculators who asked $2 or more for grandstand seats were still holding them late last night. When they saw the police were permitting persons to take places in the city stands, they sighed and went their way.

Along upper Fifth Avenue many private homes that had been closed for the season were reopened, and the owners entertained large parties of spectators. This was true at the home of Henry C. Frick, Fifth Avenue and Eighty-seventh Street, where friends watched the parade from windows and balconies, while the private stand erected by Mr. Frick for wounded men was filled to overflowing. The Carnegie home at Fifth Avenue and Ninety-second Street, also held many watchers. The ironmaster himself was not observed, but in a group on a balcony were seen members of his immediate family.

LAST OF 77TH ARRIVES.

Troops Disappointed at Coming Too Late for Parade.

The last of the 77th Division arrived yesterday afternoon on the transport President Grant from Brest and landed at Pier 6, Hoboken, six hours after the parade had ended across the Hudson River in New York. The officers and men expressed considerable disappointment at not having arrived in time to march up Fifth Avenue with their comrades.

Milton M. McGrew, formerly of the 58d Pioneer Regiment, who was the troop commander on board, said that the George Washington was in Brest at the time the units were, and that he had asked the Embarkation Officer to let the 77th men travel on that vessel instead of the President Grant. "The embarkation officials at Brest told me that we should arrive in plenty of time," he said, "but I knew better."

Captain Edward B. Twombly of the 304th Machine Gun Battalion, son of the late Hamilton Twombly, said that the Grant's boilers were in such condition that the engineers could not get up any speed on them.

"When they tried to squeeze an extra knot," he continued, "after receiving orders on Saturday night, she did worse than before because the boilers leaked badly. The men were all keenly disappointed over being the only ones left out of the parade."

Commander G. M. Courts, executive officer of the President Grant, confirmed what the army officers had said in regard to the speed of the ship and added that she had been making barely eleven knots most of the voyage.

"Had we known the date of the parade earlier," the commander continued, "we might have got her up to twelve and a fraction over, which would have landed us on Sunday in ample time for the 77th troops on board to take part in the parade."

One of the officers aboard who had been cited for bravery in the Argonne fighting was First Lieut. Leonard McAneny of the 304th Machine Gun Battalion.

On the voyage Sergeant John H. Rogers of the 302d Ammunition Train Headquarters detachment, who lives at 461 North Washington Avenue was stricken with appendicitis. He was successfully operated upon by Dr. Arthur R. Sample, U. S. N., the ship's surgeon.

HUMOR PLAYS PART IN HEROES' PARADE

German Dachshund Amuses the Crowd by Waddling After General Alexander.

PUPILS STRIKE TO BE THERE

Boys, from Tree Tops, Deride Police Who Order Them Down—Goat Mascot Balks.

Just as Major Gen. Alexander, riding Captain, a police horse, passed through the Victory Arch in the 77th Division parade yesterday, a mongrel dachshund slipped between the feet of a policeman and began to trot along directly back of the General. It was an irritatingly German sort of a hund. All the way up the avenue the sight of the short-legged dog waddling behind the division commander brought grins to the faces of spectators. The dog held its position to the end of the parade.

All races and all creeds were in the olive drab ranks. Hell's Kitchen had Patrick Aloysius Brannigan; Solly Rosenbaum marched chestily for the East Side; J. R. Amok represented the Philippines; Giuseppe Discarito saw to it that Carmine Street had a share in the day's glory, and Sergeant Sing Kee, of the 306th Infantry, wearing the D. S. C., hailed from Chinatown.

In small groups here and there along the line were boys and girls carrying school books. The books caused comment—all city institutions had a holiday—until it became known that 100 students of the Rockville Centre High School had struck when permission was refused them to attend the parade.

The problem of seeing the parade was quickly solved by small boys who swarmed into Madison Square Park early in the morning. Before the police arrived the lads were perched in trees like a flock of crows, and neither persuasion nor threats by the bluecoats moved them until the last soldier and the last band had passed up the avenue.

After the men had dispersed at the end of the parade most of them hurried to the armories where luncheon was served by the Jewish Welfare Board. The men "piled" into the food. It wasn't a question of "What have you got?" but a demand of "How much have you?"

While Mayor Hylan and Governor Smith were placing mourning wreaths at the foot of the Roll of Honor in front of the Public Library, and while the hand was playing a dirge, another band down the line came to the conclusion that the solemn ceremonies were over. So the baton dropped, and the band burst energetically into "Ja-Da," a ragtime melody with jazz galore. Some one tipped off the band to its false notes, and the musicians promptly switched to "John Brown's Body."

A grim-looking company was tramping past Forty-first Street. The bands were stilled. A blushing young thing, who had been worrying persons nearby by frantic efforts to look down the avenue every minute or so, gave a start and her eyes sparkled. "Oh, Arthur, Oh, Arthur, here I am!" she yelled. And a tall young man got violently red, even to his ears, while the grim-looking company grinned.

Butts is a goat, and he belongs to the 305th Machine Gun Battalion. With grave dignity he carried himself all the way from Washington Square to the Victory Arch. Arrived there, he apparently considered his duty done, for with a couple of long-drawn "baas," he quit the army. It required three policemen to convince Butts that a parade was no time to be A. W. O. L.

Ticket speculators were out in full force, but were out of luck. There were free seats for nearly everybody, and before the parade was over many speculators were considering bankruptcy proceedings. "We expected to clean up today," said one as he gazed forlornly at a fistful of tickets, "but some of us were stung good and plenty."

A big man, whose nativity was suggested by a brogue, stood up in a stand at Fifty-ninth Street as General Alexander came abreast and shouted: "That's him; the greatest General that ever was. No wonder the Germans had to beat it—with him and my three boys over there!" The speech raised a cheer from the crowd and General Alexander rode on with a broad smile.

A MILLION CHEER 77TH IN FINAL HIKE

descent and proclivity were pretty well Americanized there, but the men of every color of skin and cast of countenance yesterday bore that indescribable aspect that all recognize as Americanism. The average man in the division had taken off five pounds of fat and put on twenty-five pounds of muscle. Helmets and heavy packs had put the necks and shoulders of supermen upon them. Long discipline and finally close quarters with death had cut the lines of strength and experience into their faces, which give a certain uniformity of expression to all American veterans that can still be traced in the features of the members of the Grand Army of the Republic. These lines were not always predominant yesterday, however, because they were softened by joy over being at home and near discharge from the irks of war.

The nation, State, and city were represented among those who turned out to honor the glorified cross-section of New York City's mosaic of peoples. Secretary of War Baker came from Washington, so that the country would pay its tribute through the highest official in the United States. Mayor Hylan and Governor Smith, Major Gen. Thomas H. Barry of the Department of the East, and a long line of men eminent in military and civil life were in the reviewing stand.

Emblem Leads Parade.

The crowd, which had been becoming more and more eager from early in the morning, began to grow animated when a group of army motor cycles rode along the avenue just before the parade was due. Hundreds of thousands got their flags ready to wave, and the stands and sidewalks became banks of fluttering color.

The wave of anticipation moved through the crowd about half a mile ahead of the procession itself. It was first a murmur, and then rose in volume, as throng magnetism carried the feeling from person to person that the great spectacle was nearing. The consciousness moved at a uniform pace, as though it were an invisible advance spirit of the parade, marching at a cadence of 128 steps a minute, like the division, and arriving before the faint strains from the band or the cheering further down the line reached the crowd.

The noise along the Avenue had become a roar when the head of the parade came into view, and then it suddenly subsided. In the distance could be seen a row of white banners, and as the spectators hushed solemn music could be heard following them. Between the two rows of banners could be seen a gilded miniature Statue of Liberty about six feet in height, drawn by two black horses. The Statue of Liberty, the emblem of the 77th, rested upon a purple velvet base, strewn with lilies in memory of the 2,356 men of the division who went to glorious death. From Washington Square to the New York Public Library this memorial was surrounded by soldiers bearing palms of victory and wreaths of purple flowers, the tribute of the New York Draft Boards. The soldiers bearing the palms dropped out at Forty-second Street to take part in the services at the Court of the Heroic Dead.

On the ten white banners was written, in 2,356 gold stars, the cost of the division's achievements in the Argonne. The stars were in square fields, each hanging by two gold chains from a standard, and each field edged with gold and decorated with two gold cords. The banners were weighted to keep them from fluttering, and they formed a beautiful and solemn picture that affected the crowd deeply. The journey of this memorial along Fifth Avenue was accompanied by an impressive silence from uncovered and standing throngs. It was deeply touching to the thousands of men and women in the crowd who wore gold stars; and groups here and there were in tears, with sometimes a woman or a child sobbing alone.

Crowd Deeply Moved.

From Washington Square to 110th Street eyes reverently followed the memorial of the division to its fallen, and as it passed the mood of the crowd underwent a profound change.

Ten minutes, according to schedule, was allowed to elapse after the cortège of honor and the Police Department Band, which followed playing dirges, before the parade itself arrived, but the effect remained. The greeting to the division itself, in consequence, was less lively and demonstrative, but probably more from the heart than it would have been otherwise.

At the end of ten minutes a line of mounted policemen, extending from curb to curb, came into sight and got its tribute of applause. Zigzagging back of this file was a War Department car with a number of uniformed camera men and moving picture photographers, belonging to the Signal Corps. They were snapping the crowds here and there for films which will be filed in the archives of the great war. Wherever the recording eyes of these cameras turned, the men, women, and children within the field compassed by their lenses became as grains of dust in the mountains of material which will make up the official history of the war.

General Alexander's Greeting.

After watching with curiosity the modern processes of history making, the crowd saw a soldier riding up the avenue on a fine bay, his right hand in constant action responding with salutes to the never interrupted cheering which greeted him along the five-mile march. He was Major Gen. Robert Alexander, commander of the 77th, the proudest man in the nation, struggling to conceal his feelings, although he almost seemed to be saying: "See here, New York, what do you thing of our boys?"

General Alexander carried across his saddle four of the long-stemmed American Beauty roses with which the division had been showered. The wounded men who followed were all but buried in flowers. General Alexander could not suppress the smile of gratification which overspread his face, but he would take palms occasionally, when the ovation was unusually big, to toss his head in the direction of the men behind him, apparently to indicate that the demonstration should be for them. Behind the General came his personal staff on horseback, and six mounted orderlies carrying the General's flag. The remainder of the divisional staff marched afoot.

With blue and red pennons streaming in front the headquarters troop came next, with guns (sans bayonets) over shoulders, and helmets slung upon their backs. Marching sixteen abreast they filled Fifth Avenue from curb to curb. A steady roar of applause greeted them all the way along.

The next body of soldiers was the 302d Engineers, marching in the same solid order behind their standard, a staff decorated with victory palms and bearing a banner on which appeared a battlemented fort. The Engineers were loudly hailed.

The 302d Field Signal Battalion came next with a banner at their head in which small red flags were crossed in a white square. They marched without equipment except their uniforms and helmets.

Bedecked Like Bridesmaids.

A wicked-looking machine-gun barrel crowned the next standard, which was escorted by a group of soldiers loaded like bridesmaids with flowers. The flowers were the gifts of admirers of the unit which followed, the 306th Machine Gun Battalion. Its sister unit came next, the 306th Machine Gun Battalion, both battalions marching without weapons.

The great spectacles for the crowd were the infantry and artillery marching as infantry. Of all the great parades and military pageants which New York has seen in recent years there has been nothing which so abundantly and impressively filled the eye as the battalions which marched yesterday in solid masses from sidewalk to sidewalk, each filling a little more than the length of a block, with glistering bayonets rising rythmically with each step.

Yesterday was the first time that large bodies of fully armed men had been seen marching in compact formation. The eye could just comfortably take in one battalion at the short range afforded by the stands. The result was that, from an optical viewpoint, the parade was more effective than any of its predecessors. The bayonets at a little distance seemed thick-standing as a field of grain, and the battalions appeared like huge rectangles of olive drab cloth with a steel gray metallic mixture. They gave an impression of concentrated power which could not be conveyed by open order marching in the narrow limits of a city street.

The New York crowd, which has always appeared to be more or less in awe of its own soldiers, was at first shocked dumb by these compressed but tremendous spectacles, but they soon recovered and cheered their loudest.

Marching without heavy packs and with helmets on their backs instead of on their heads, the traveling was child's play to these veterans of the greatest of wars and they were the happiest of humors. They marched with professional ease and precision, but without any pretense of iron immobility of countenance. The closeness of the formations kept the noncommissioned officers hedged in and broke the range of their searching eyes. This physical fact, together with the distance in time from actual war and the nearness of demobilization, narrowed the

TELLS HOW MEN FOUGHT

Gen. Alexander Says Troops Attacked for 21 Successive Days in the Forest of Argonne.

Officers of the 77th Division were guests at a dinner last night at the Waldorf-Astoria, given in their honor by the Mayor's Committee of Welcome to Homecoming Troops. The speakers, who included Mayor Hylan, Rodman Wanamaker, Major Gen. Robert Alexander, Martin Conboy, Director of the Draft in New York City, and Brig. Gen. Michael J. Lenihan, united in high praise of the valor of the cosmopolitan division.

On behalf of the city Rodman Wanamaker, who was Chairman, presented to General Alexander the colors, and to Mrs. Alexander a diamond brooch. Secretary of War Baker was called back to Washington, and was unable to be present, and Governor Smith had returned to Albany. The guests, including 460 officers of the division, numbered approximately 700.

Mystery surrounding the middle name of Mayor Hylan was solved, for he was introduced by Mr. Wanamaker Mayor Hylan had praised the division as John "Faithful" Hylan. After General Alexander was called on. He told of the exploits of his division and of its fighting from the Vesle to the Aisne and in the Argonne Forest, "that natural fortress that had always been regarded as an impenetrable obstacle to the invader."

"And these hardy backwoodsmen from Hester Street, the Bowery and the East Side landed right in the middle of this thick forest, faced by a network of obstacles you cannot imagine, and they got away with it, which was not bad at all," he said. "They did not do it alone. There were other divisions in the vicinity. But the 77th was the only division that operated in the Argonne Forest, and in that forest they attacked twenty-one successive mornings.

"They got up early every day and promptly at 5 o'clock, just as Jim might go to the factory with his dinner pail, these men attacked. They continued to attack in the face of difficulties that bespoke a spirit we cannot praise too highly. They began to attack Nov. 1, and by the afternoon of Nov. 6 they had advanced 37½ kilometers."

General Alexander told how the division penetrated to the Meuse, and of warnings from the Headquarters Staff that they were so isolated they would be surrounded if they crossed, and would be "chewed up" by the enemy. He praised General Lenihan, General Price, and the other officers, particularly those in the engineers and the artillery.

The 77th Division was perhaps the most cosmopolitan division in the whole American Army, he said, and told of the decorations for gallant service that he recalled. Of these he mentioned the names of a man born in Germany, a Chinese and a Jew, and then said that others came from Ireland, Scotland, and all over the earth, and each was represented "in the still more honorable order of the wooden cross."

General Alexander told the guests they had witnessed the beginning and the end of the organization, which, while organized for the purposes of war, was used as an instrument of pure civism, patriotism, and Americanism. He praised the morale of the men and thanked those at home who made efforts in their behalf.

Mr. Conboy thanked the Mayor's Committee on behalf of the draft boards for its co-operation and service in carrying out the provisions of the Selective Service act. He said the 77th Division included the highest type of citizenship found in America. He said the forest of the Argonne, which was not taken by Hannibal and which was avoided by Napoleon, succumbed to Alexander, "not Alexander the Great, but Alexander the Greater."

Mayor Hylan praised the 77th as the Liberty Division. "The men of this division return to us bringing with them honors from the battlefields of Europe," he said. "The gallant stand of the detachment of the 307th and 308th Infantry in the forest fastness when facing imminent annihilation will be immortal in American history. The perseverance which characterized this little band of seven hundred patriots is typical of all the men of the division. Perseverance under whatever difficulties, under whatever privations, afforded the only chance of victory, the only chance of safety to our country, and the only chance of safety to the civilized world."

Entertainment was furnished by the Police Band, the Police Department Quartet, Emma Haig, Lou Lockett, Belle Baker, Alma Adair, Lillian Shaw, Ted Lewis and his Jazz Band, Wellington Cross, the Oakland sisters, Jack Murray, and Johnny Dooley.

Mayor George S. Buck of Buffalo, with five of the City Commissioners and twelve members of the City Council attended the dinner. General Alexander will go to Buffalo today with 200 replacement men from that city to take part in a parade.

2,200 JERSEY TROOPS REACH NEWPORT NEWS

Governor Edge and Mayors of Six Cities Welcome Men of the 114th Infantry.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., May 6.—The transport Madawaska arrived here today with the 114th Infantry regiment of the 29th (Blue and Gray) Division, numbering approximately 2,200 officers and men. The regiment is composed largely of National Guardsmen from New Jersey, and Governor Edge of that State came here to welcome them.

Col. George Williams was in command of the troops aboard the Madawaska, which included the Headquarters Company, Machine Gun Battalion, and Companies A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, and part of Company I, all of the 114th Infantry. Mayors of six New Jersey cities went down the harbor in launches to greet the soldiers.

Officers said five men of the 114th won citations in the Argonne fighting, in which the regiment's casualties totaled 700. The 29th Division was in the Argonne campaign for twenty-one days.

BURLESON WINS WIRE RATE INCREASE POINT

Supreme Court Allows Collection of Higher Rates in Illinois, Pending Appeals.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Postmaster General Burleson received authority in an order issued today by the Supreme Court to continue to collect increased telegraph rates in Illinois until final determination of appeals brought by the Government from Federal court decrees enjoining him from putting his new rate order into effect in that State.

Upon the Government's motion the court ordered that temporary injunctions restraining Illinois authorities from interfering with orders increasing intrastate rates remain effective, and that decrees issued by Federal District Judge Landis dissolving those injunctions and restraining Mr. Burleson from increasing the rates remain temporarily inoperative.

Arguments in the telephone and telegraph case, involving the authority of the Postmaster General to increase intrastate toll rates were concluded late today in the Supreme Court and the cases were taken under advisement. In view of the importance of the questions involved both in the wire cases and railroad rate cases argued yesterday, it is believed that the court will render decisions in the cases before entering on the Summer adjournment next month.

Arguments today were made by W. H. Hitchcock of Boston, Assistant Attorney General of Massachusetts; Oliver E. Sweet, Assistant Attorney General of South Dakota; Fred S. Jackson, representing Kansas, and Raymond S. Pruitt, Assistant Attorney General of Illinois, all in behalf of the proceedings attacking the Postmaster General's order brought in their respective States. Henry S. Robbins of Chicago made the closing argument for the Government.

WOMEN'S SUMMER GOWNS
For FORMAL and INFORMAL OCCASIONS

THE festivities and social functions of Summertide, demand two distinct types of gowns. For the luncheon, the afternoon wedding, the garden party, the race meet or the tea, and for the countless gaities of the season, there are frocks of taffeta silk, plain or flowered Georgette, organdie, black, ecru or pastel tinted laces, fashioned in the prevailing mode and emphasizing the last word in silhouette.

And for the dinners and dances and all the more formal functions, there are gowns of brocades, jet or jetted net, tulle, chiffon, taffeta, lace or satin—gracious of line and charming of style.

And at 59.50, 69.50 and 79.50 there are gowns one does not expect to find at these prices.

Gibbs SPLIT-BELT UNION SUIT

Notice the belt in the illustration. It is "split." It extends underneath the flap—therefore prevents sagging and gaping of the seat when closed. The construction of this feature gives an extra large seat opening. Whether stout or slender, you are assured absolute comfort and convenience.

Made of fine, soft cotton interlooped in such a fashion as to make a thin, porous garment of lightness and strength. It keeps the body cool by absorbing the perspiration without becoming soggy and adhering to the body like muslin or nainsook.

Made to fit but loose fitting. As carefully made as a tailored suit. Low neck, short sleeves, knee length.

An Unusual Display of
is an especially attractive feature of the Wool Dress Goods Department, on the First Floor.

Agreeably suggestive of the dolce far niente of Summer days at the yacht club, the country club or the seashore are the smart white serges, richly embroidered in black or white wool or silk. The all-white fabrics will, however, appeal to many; and among these are tailor serge, silk-and-wool cord, tricotine, Poiret twill, jersey cloth, English doeskin and cricket flannel.

Dainty Cotton Frocks
that speak to us of sunny Summer days are shown in so many charming variations of style and material that it is difficult, in describing them, to decide just where to begin.

Simplicity is the dominant note throughout --but it is simplicity of the artistic, not the bucolic, type. The Colonial influence is evidenced in many of the prettiest frocks; but not to the exclusion of other influences, somewhat more modern. The designers have, in fact, borrowed from the picturesqueness of several periods in arriving at an appropriate representation of our own.

Some of the prices (in stock) are appended:

Simple Frocks in dainty color effects, at	$6.75 to 55.00
Simple Frocks in all white,	8.50 to 55.00
Cotton Frocks in more elaborate designs, at	$58.00 to 165.00
Linen Frocks	11.50 to 38.00

International TRUCKS

Reliable Service at Low Operating Costs

One of the strongest reasons impelling more and more prominent business institutions to standardize on International Trucks is the fact that International Trucks give reliable service at low operating costs.

And right here, in the matter of actual road service and operating costs, is where the real difference in trucks shows up.

International Trucks are simple in design, unusually sturdy in construction—and consequently they perform better and more cheaply on the road than many trucks do on paper.

Call them on the telephone and get the facts from them direct.

International Trucks now on exhibition in our salesrooms. Come see them—we'll be glad to give you complete data as to International costs in your line of business.

HEAR BOLSHEVIKI PLAN A TEST HERE

WOULD HOLD HOUR'S STRIKE

Attorney General Confers with Legislative Members to Organize a Searching Inquiry.

Hints of a Bolshevist plan to hold up New York City in some unexplained way for an hour, as a spectacular demonstartion to the world that the "Red" brotherhood had developed fighting strength on this sity of the ocean, are said to be embodied in reports which have reached the legislative committee created for the purpose of investigating the origin and extent of Bolshevism in this country, with a view to recommending remedial legislation.

Members of the committee who were in this city yesterday were not inclined to discuss in detail this and other reports received within such a short time since their final organization. It was learned, however, that, in view of the mass of information already in the hands of the committee, many members who at the outset were skeptical as to the necessity for an investigation had become convinced and are impressed with the importance of the task with which they have been charged by the Legislature.

The plan to retain private counsel to conduct the examination of witnesses has been dropped. When the committee was organized, it was expected that Nathan L. Miller, ex-Justice of the Court of Appeals, would be asked to serve in that capacity. It was learned yesterday that Attorney General Charles D. Newton, who by virtue of his office is equipped with semi-judicial powers, would act as inquisitor in chief.

The Attorney General spent several hours yesterday conferring with Senator Clayton R. Lusk of Cortland, Chairman of the committee, and Senate Leader J. Henry Walters, who returned from Atlantic City, where he has been resting since the Legislature adjourned, to take part in the conference.

Chairman Lusk, on recommendation from the Attorney General, has decided to organize a secret service force to gather information for the committee and to enable the lawmakers to sift the chaff from the wheat in the reports and rumors that reach the committee in every mail.

During the first year of the war the Legislature enacted a law under which the Attorney General's office was authorized to organize such a force for the purpose of bringing to justice cases involving disloyalty and seditious activities. The force, it was said, proved its effectiveness when it brought to light the plottings of Bolo Pacha in this country, which subsequently led to his condemnation by a French court-martial and his execution. It was said last night that this force, augmented and reorganized, might be used by the committee.

Special Deputy Attorney General Alfred L. Becker, who conducted this work for the Attorney General, and now is attached to the New York City bureau of the Attorney General's office, was in conference with Senator Lusk and Attorney General Newton last night.

"I expect to call the committee together for the purpose of beginning public hearings within ten days or two weeks," said Senator Lusk last night. "At the present time I am engaged in necessary preliminary work in connection with the investigation, such as organizing a corps of investigators and examining a mass of information that has reached the committee. I expect to remain here almost continuously for that purpose until we are ready to subpoena witnesses and start taking testimony."

It was learned last night that a special investigation would be made of the foreign language newspapers printed in this State. Attorney General Newton yesterday set translators to work on some sixty such publications.

287,595 SOLDIERS RETURNED IN APRIL

Homeward Movement Exceeds Estimates for Month by 32,595.

1,082,329 STILL IN FRANCE

Transports Calamares, Eastern Sea, and Espagne Are Bound for New York.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—The homeward movement of the American troops from France approached 10,000 men a day in April, according to figures made public today by the War Department. A total of 287,595 men embarked during the month, as compared with an estimated possible maximum movement of 255,000. The speeding up of the "turn around" of the transports was said to have been responsible for the increase.

The figures show that the total estimated strength of the army on April 29, not including marines, was 1,775,907, of whom 1,082,329 were in Europe, 108,097 at sea, and 541,176 in the United States. The strength of the army in France on that date was 56 per cent. of that on November 11.

Enlistments reported since February 28, when voluntary recruiting was resumed, totalled 23,387, of whom 6,017 asked for duty in France.

Sailing of the following transports was announced today by the War Department:

The Haverford, due at Philadelphia May 18, with the 107th Engineers and the 107th Engineer Train complete, two casual companies, and Motor Transport Companies Nos. 701 and 702. Major Gen. Leroy S. Lyon is aboard the ship.

The Calamares, due at New York May 13, has the headquarters, medical, and ordnance detachments and Companies A and B, 107th Machine Gun Battalion; headquarters, supply, and machine gun companies, sanitary and ordnance detachments, and Companies A and B, 113th Infantry; Supply Company and Battery C, 108th Field Artillery; Headquarters, 57th Infantry Brigade; five casual companies, and Brig. Gen. Leroy S. Upton, commanding the 57th Infantry Brigade.

The Eastern Sea is due at New York May 21 with a few casuals, and the Espagne is due at the same port May 14 with two companies of casuals and a few officers.

The battleship Louisiana has been diverted from Newport News and will arrive at New York May 14.

POLICE MAKE FIRST AIRPLANE 'ARREST'

New York's Aerial Squad Stages Successful Demonstration at Atlantic City Convention.

SHERIFF'S AUTO IS TAKEN

Wireless Telephone Used to Notify Man in the Clouds That He Must Go In Pursuit.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 6.—New York's aerial police, co-operating with the shore authorities, today made the first airplane "arrest" ever recorded as one of the features of "Police Day," staged here on the program of the Second Pan American Aeronautical Convention. Fifteen members of the New York air force put the program through before representatives of the leading cities of the East. Winning great favor with their work, and incidentally, giving the Atlantic City airport the honor of being the first "headquarters" in action to make an actual arrest.

Sheriff Alfred J. Perkins of Atlantic County drove to the aviation field in his automobile and left it parked near the end of the grandstand. While he was chatting with Eddie Stinson, the skyrocket among the aviators here participating in the meet, Richard Black, Assistant Chief of the Atlantic City Vice Squad, "stole" his automobile and started on a mad dash along the Meadow Boulevard, which parallels the airport. The "thief" headed toward Pleasantville, the mainland town at the other end of the meadows, five miles away.

Seizing a small Ors parachute, which had been used during the last several days to demonstrate mail bag delivery from an airplane without the necessity of a stop, Sheriff Perkins leaped aboard the Stinson airplane. About that time Deputy Sheriff S. Herbert Mapes of the New York Air Police "recognized" Black as a "notorious New York motor bandit" as the "thief" shot past the grandstand. Captain Horace Keane of the Cloud Division was circling overhead in an airplane and Major Mapes, operating a wireless telephone from "headquarters" shot instructions to him that the man in the automobile was "badly wanted in New York." Captain Keane wheeled about and set sail for the mainland just as Sheriff Perkins, aboard Stinson's machine, left the ground and they took up the pursuit together.

The speeding airplanes beat the motor car to Pleasantville, where Sheriff Perkins dropped a message via the parachute to a traffic officer on the shore road, over which all motor traffic must pass to get anywhere on the mainland. The policeman intercepted the speeding "thief" as he approached the crossing and placed him under arrest. Captain Keane descended in a field nearby and lodged a detainer with Sheriff Perkins who had also alighted. The "prisoner," handcuffed to Detective Harry Fulmer, was back in front of the Grandstand eleven minutes after he had "stolen" the car and the first official aerial arrest was recorded at "headquarters."

A short time later Major Granville A. Pollock, wing commander of the police squadron, demonstrated an "arrest" with a seaplane, capturing a "motorboat pirate" in the waterway that forms a part of the airport.

The world's first airport here is to serve as the model for municipal institutions of the kind throughout the nation. It has facilities for both seaplanes and airplanes.

Will Consult Pacific Coast Owners About New Contracts.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Pacific Coast shipbuilders were asked today by Chairman Hurley to come to Washington soon and discuss with the Shipping Board the question of replacing canceled contracts and adjusting payments to be made in connection with the construction of shipyards as a war emergency.

It is understood that the board expects to award many more contracts to the Pacific Coast yards because of the good record made by them during the war.

Kingston Newspaper Predicts Quadrupling of Trade in Five Years.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, May 6.—The Gleaner publishes a prediction that the trade of Jamaica will quadruple in the next five years, because of imperial preference in Trinidad, Jamaica, and other colonies. Large numbers of small farmers will cultivate cane for the sugar factories, and also cocoa. Thus preference directly benefits thousands of smaller landholders as well as the large proprietors.

Jamaica was a considerable coffee colony once, and is expected to become so again.

Buenos Aires Edict Bans Meetings and Seditious Newspapers.

BUENOS AIRES, May 6.—The Chief of Police has issued an order forbidding further anarchistic meetings, either in the open air or behind closed doors; the publication of seditious newspapers and literature and the utterance of language insulting to the country or flag. District police captains are directed to disperse meetings as soon as they are apprised of them.

Immediately after the edict was posted, the publisher of the radical newspaper Bandera Roja took the next boat for Montevideo.

The managers of commercial and industrial enterprises in Buenos Aires announced last night, after a long conference with striking employes, that they probably would close all business houses in view of the unreasonable demands of the employes. The managers will meet again on Thursday to take final decision.

HOUSE TO RECAST THE SUPPLY BILLS

TAX FIGHT LED BY PENROSE

Old Guard Wants Profit and Income Levies Reduced—Moves for Protective Tariff.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—In anticipation of the early convening of Congress in special session Chairmen of important House committees have been requested by Representative Frank Mondell, Republican leader of the next House, to be ready to consider promptly the supply measures which failed of passage as a result of the Senate filibuster during the final days of the late session. Mr. Mondell said today that the committees would consider the annual appropriation bills anew and that there would be many changes as a result of peace and the decreasing cost of government.

It is expected that Representative Julius Kahn, Chairman of the Military Committee, will press his measure for universal military training, and General March, Chief of Staff, renew his recommendation for a large standing army.

The first act of the Ways and Means Committee will be the introduction of a resolution to repeal Section 904 of the new revenue law, known as the semi-luxury tax. Such a resolution passed the House last session, but failed in the Senate. Representative Nicholas Longworth will present a bill to increase the tariff on dyestuffs and chemicals. Other protective tariff measures will be sponsored by Republicans.

Senator Penrose, who will be Chairman of the Finance Committee, will take the lead in pressing for a reduction of the war profit and income taxes. The Republicans say they do not intend to abide by the 1920 schedules of war profits and income taxes written into the Revenue bill by the Democrats. The Old Guard will try to reduce these taxes below the rates carried in the present law for 1920. This move will meet opposition from progressives in the Senate and undoubtedly produce a bitter factional fight.

It is necessary that Congress shall pass promptly the annual appropriation bills which failed in the last session. As Congress probably will not be in session before May 26, at the earliest, not more than a month will intervene before the half dozen supply measures must be ready for use at the beginning of the next fiscal year on July 1.

The bills which failed include the Army Appropriation bill, carrying $1,238,282,967; Navy, $824,708,521; Agricultural, $37,353,858; General Deficiency, including $600,000,000 additional for the Railroad Administration; Sundry Civil, including $600,000,000 for the Shipping Board, in all $1,112,919,735; District of Columbia, $14,000,000; Indian, $15,430,000; Soldiers' Settlement, $100,000,000; appropriation of $5,000,000 for expenses of President Wilson and the Peace Commission in Europe; Public Buildings, $63,000,000; Colombian Treaty, $15,000,000; Civil Service Retirement, bill to extend control over telegraph and telephone systems, Woman Suffrage Amendment, Water Power, Coal and Oil Leasing, Wartime Prohibition Enforcement, Immigration, including provision to exclude immigrants for a period of four years, and for the exclusion of undesirable aliens; reform of court-martial, and Americanization.

Unless the annual appropriation bills are passed by July 1 it will be necessary for Congress to pass a joint resolution extending the amounts granted to the various departments in the previous fiscal year.

Representative James W. Good, Chairman of the Appropriations Committee, will offer a bill designed to concentrate appropriation bills in one committee, and the formation of a sort of budget system.

AMERICANS AID ALBANIANS.

Fifty Red Cross Workers Feed and Clothe the Destitute.

DURAZZO, Albania, April 17, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—The American Red Cross Mission to Albania, in charge of Major Robert C. Denison of New Haven, Conn., and comprising fifty members, is at work here. The mission has with it a large quantity of food, clothing, and medical supplies which it is distributing to the poor from bases established at Scutari, Tirano, and Durazzo. A hospital will be opened at Tirano to take care of the destitute sick of the country.

Testimonial for Admiral Sims.

A testimonial will be given to Rear Admiral Williams S. Sims at a meeting in his honor at Carnegie Hall Monday evening, at 8:30 o'clock, under the auspices of the Civic Forum. George W. Wickersham will preside, and there will be addresses by President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University, the Rev. Dr. William T. Manning of Trinity Church, and Henry Clews, Chairman of the Committee of the Civic Forum. The formal testimonial will be presented to the Admiral in the name of prominent citizens of New York, after which he will tell of the part played by the American Navy in the war.

Every step a hammer blow

EVERY step you take with hard leather heels on modern, hard pavements acts as a hammer blow to your nervous system.

The average person, even though his work is indoors, takes 8,000 steps a day—gives his system 8,000 daily jolts and jars. The constant repetition of these shocks exhausts your energies, contributes largely to the state of over-fatigue.

You can eliminate this great cause of fatigue. You cannot change the hard pavements, but you can change your heels. O'Sullivan's Heels absorb the shocks that tire you out. They relieve the jolts and jars that make a burden of walking.

To secure the great resiliency and durability of O'Sullivan's Heels, the highest grades of rubber are "compounded" with the best toughening agents known. The "compound" is then "cured" or baked under high pressure.

It is this special process that has, since the making of the first rubber heel, established O'Sullivan's Heels as the standard of rubber heel quality.

O'Sullivan's Heels are guaranteed to wear twice as long as ordinary rubber heels; and will outlast three pairs of leather heels.

Go to your shoe repairer today and have O'Sullivan's Heels put on your shoes.

O'Sullivan's Heels are furnished in black, white or tan; for men, women and children. Specify O'Sullivan's Heels, and be sure that you get O'Sullivan's—avoid the disappointment of substitutes.

HOPE TO FIND A PLAN TO CURB LANDLORDS

Municipal Justices to Meet with Mayor and Rent Profiteering Committee Today.

MANY SUGGESTIONS MADE

Present Eviction Law Blamed for Much Suffering—Church Move Checks Some Owners.

The forty-seven Justices of the Municipal Courts in this city, who have heard thousands of landlord and tenant cases in recent months, will meet with Mayor Hylan at 4 o'clock this afternoon in Room 1220 in the Municipal Building to discuss remedies to minimize rent profiteering by greedy landlords.

It is expected that the meeting will serve to bring out suggestions to ameliorate the condition of the tenants. Hitherto the Municipal Court Justices have striven to be as lenient as possible in the cases of persons served with dispossess notices who were unable, because of the housing shortage, to find other homes. But even this leniency has not been sufficient to remedy conditions for tenants.

Students of the housing situation have placed the blame for much of the suffering on the law which permits the landlord to evict a tenant on comparatively short notice, although the force of such eviction may be lessened by extensions of time granted by the Municipal Court Justices.

At the meeting this afternoon, called on the suggestion of the Mayor's Committee on Rent Profiteering, of which Nathan Hirsch is Chairman, it is expected that something will be devised to get at the root of the problem. Mr. Hirsch will place before the meeting the information concerning evil practices gathered by his committee.

The Mayor's committee believes the action of the Methodist churches in opening their edifices temporarily to tenants evicted and unable to find new apartments has served to dampen the profiteering propensities of some landlords who, it was said, feared that the publicity following the eviction of tenants who took up temporary abode in churches would be bad for them. Reports have reached the Mayor's committee that some landlords have begun shifting their ground, and instead of demanding further increases in rent, they are making demands for the apartments so they may raise the rents to new applicants.

In the cases of tenants who say that they are willing to pay rent increases if necessary repairs are made, it has been suggested to the Mayor's committee by counsel that Tenement House Department attachés make inspections to determine the repairs needed, following which the landlord is to be ordered to make the changes.

Four thousand tenants of the Brownsville section of Brooklyn, at two meetings held there yesterday, decided to refuse to pay any rent until the landlords reduced their prices. If they are dispossessed, the tenants say they will picket the houses. They are organized as the Brooklyn Tenants' Union.

In a letter to the Mayor's committee, a tenant on Sackman Street, Brooklyn, complained that in a short time the house in which he lived changed landlords seven or eight times, and that with every change the rent was increased. The last landlord raised the rent $5 a month, he said, and the one who has just acquired the property has served notice of a rise of $10 more.

Suggestion was made by an architect, writing to the Mayor's committee, that the tenement house law be amended so as to permit the conversion of three-story store and family buildings into tenements where the stores are vacant, for a period of one year. He said that these buildings could be thus converted in a few weeks at a nominal cost and could be used by many people.

Soldiers to Write Mothers May 11.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—A personal request of Secretary Baker that each officer and soldier in the army write a letter home on Mothers' Day, May 11, "in recognition of the wonderful part mothers of America played in making the world safe for democracy," was conveyed today to the commanding Generals of all departments by the Adjutant General.

CROWDER WANTS CUBA TO POSTPONE ELECTION

Asks Menocal to Delay Presidential Campaign Until New Electoral Law Is Passed.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Cuba, May 6.—General Crowder held a long conference with President Menocal at the latter's farm near Havana today and strongly recommended that Cuba's presidential campaign be suspended for the present, or at least that the parties refrain from naming their candidate until a new electoral law is framed up, for which General Crowder is working in conjunction with some of Cuba's legislators.

General Crowder explained to the President that the new electoral bill will provide that candidates shall not be nominated until six months before the holding of the elections, showing that the long drawn out campaigns only result in disturbing the economic conditions of the country.

Another important addition to Cuba's electoral law now being framed by General Crowder is one borrowed from the American electoral law, namely, the limiting of campaign expenses and requiring the candidates to publish what their campaign expenses are.

Just how President Menocal is going to stop the present campaign is not foreseen by prominent politicians seen tonight by THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent. It seems to be the concensus of opinion that the only thing the President can do is issue a letter to the parties asking them to refrain from naming their candidates until the new electoral law is made. Whether the political parties, already in the heat of the campaign, will accept suggestion remains to be seen.

The national convention of the Liberal Party is already set for next Saturday night, and while Dr. Alfredo Zayas, who is a candidate for the Presidential nomination, is desirous of postponing the convention, General Pino Guerra and other partisans insist the convention be held on Saturday as planned.

Business interests in Cuba will be delighted if the suggestion of General Crowder has the desired result.

EXPECT 2 ARRESTS IN BOMB PLOT CASE

Detectives Reported to Have Western I. W. W. Agitators Under Surveillance.

BOTH WERE IN NEW YORK

Came to City Just Before First of Explosives Were Put In the Mails.

That two important arrests are pending in the mail bomb conspiracy, the object of which was the assassination of prominent men in all parts of the country, was a report in Federal and local detective circles yesterday. It was said the authorities had information which seemed to implicate two Western agitators, both of them anarchists and members of the I. W. W., in the plot which was frustrated by the vigilance of postal authorities in various parts of the country.

No information as to the identity of the suspects was given out. It was said the agitators arrived in New York a few days before the first bombs were mailed. These were the bombs addressed to District Attorney Fickert of San Francisco, United States Senator King of Utah and Mayor Ole Hanson of Seattle. The investigation of these men is being directed, it was said, by Inspector Faurot of the Police Headquarters bomb squad, and both suspects are said to be under constant surveillance by his men.

It was reported yesterday that John B. Stanchfield, the lawyer, had received a bomb. A suspicious package was turned over to Inspector Egan of the Bureau of Combustibles, who carefully opened it and found it contained candy.

Charles R. Baldwin, head of the "Baldwin Medical Institute," at 135 West Forty-fifth Street, was held in $2,000 bail to await the action of the Federal Grand Jury yesterday by United States Commissioner Samuel M. Hitchcock, on the charge of unlawfully having explosives in his possession.

The table in the Commissioner's office was covered with three "75" shrapnel shells, one five-inch shell, canisters in which to hold them, and an array of bottles labeled "Tetryl," TNT, and Ammonia-Nitrate. The defendant had not obtained bail at a late hour.

William E. Cochran, Chief of the Postal Inspection Service for the New York District, said his force of Inspectors is hard at work on the bomb plot case, but that he had no information which he could make public.

PERKINS REPLIES TO CENSORS OF Y. M. C. A.

Admitting Some Mistakes, Investigator Finds Little Basis for Honest Criticism.

REVIEWS WORK IN EUROPE

Tells of Big Problems Met in Organization, Personnel, and Transportation.

George W. Perkins, Chairman of the Finance Committee of the War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A., who spent over four months in Europe in making a thorough investigation of the work done by the Y. M. C. A., made public yesterday a report covering his investigation. All phases of Y. M. C. A. work during and after the war are covered by Mr. Perkins, and he detailed at length some of the difficulties the organization found itself up against when it took up its various activities.

Mr. Perkins frankly admitted that some mistakes were made by the organization and that not all of its workers were thoroughly efficient, but he pointed out that it was impossible to obtain 100 per cent. perfection under the unusual conditions, and that, all things considered, there is little ground for honest criticism. Of the 11,299 Y. M. C. A. workers in France during the war less than 5 per cent., said Mr. Perkins, were unsuccessful, and he added: "That the workers as a whole were brave and unselfish is shown by the fact that fourteen Y. M. C. A. secretaries were killed and 126 were wounded."

In December, 1918, Mr. Perkins, Mortimer L. Schiff, F. S. Brockman, and John R. Hall were asked by the Executive Committee of the War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A. to go to Europe and make a study of the work and do everything possible to further its efficiency.

The committee's study, Mr. Perkins said, was constantly carried on with a view to making a report that would, as nearly as possible, give the hundreds of thousands of people who contributed money the information they would naturally desire. He points out that the report only covers operations of the Y. M. C. A. in France, England, Germany, and Italy, and that it does not touch on any of the large activities carried on by the organization in the various camps in this country, nor the work it did in the navy, among prisoners of war, or in other parts of Europe with the allied forces.

Chose Fittest Applicants.

Taking up the question of the personnel of the Y. M. C. A., Mr. Perkins stated that the organization found it extremely difficult at the beginning of the war to get the class of men desired to represent it in France. At the beginning fully 150,000 persons were considered by the various district committees and 40,000 of them were sifted out and seriously considered at the New York headquarters. Of this number 11,229 were finally accepted and sent to Europe. In April, 1919, he said, the Y. M. C. A. had in Europe 5,693 men and 2,657 women, making a total of 8,350.

Regarding the handling of the canteen service by the Y. M. C. A., Mr. Perkins stated that on August 20, 1917, General Pershing asked the organization to undertake the management of the army canteens and it found it an enormous job, due to the difficulty in getting supplies as well as men accustomed to handling, distributing, selling and accounting for such supplies. There was a time, he said, when the war was at its height, that it cost the Y. M. C. A. almost as much to get an automobile from the United States to France as the automobile itself cost in the United States. The report continues:

"The same was true of canteen supplies. One day we could get supplies sent on a Government boat without freight charges. The next day the only way to send them was to pay almost as much in freight as the goods cost. It will be readily seen that it was almost impossible to arrive at anything like an average cost price at which to sell these goods. Goods shipped by the Government and goods shipped by the Y. M. C. A., because of the chaotic conditions that existed at points of debarkation in the early days of the war, were occasionally unavoidably mixed up with goods shipped by individuals as pure contributions to be given away to the soldiers.

The Y. M. C. A., Mr. Perkins said, never solicited money for the purpose of giving away it canteen supplies. Its policy was to sell such supplies at as near cost as possible and to bend every effort, when fighting was in progress, to furnish the men at the front with supplies free of charge where it was at all possible to get the goods to them.

Aimed to Sell at Cost.

"The statement," he said, "has frequently been made that the Y. M. C. A. charged higher prices for canteen supplies than the army did. This was true at a certain periods when the cost of transportation was exceedingly high and when it was difficult to determine costs accurately. As promptly as the costs could be reduced the prices were reduced, and for many articles the Y. M. C. A. charged lower prices than the Quartermaster did. The latter fact is additional evidence of how extremely difficult it was, during the fighting period, to ascertain the cost of articles so as to fix a proper price, for certainly the Quartermaster did not wish to make money on the sales any more than did the Y. M. C. A. The final results of the Y. M. C. A.'s canteen operations will show a substantial loss.

"It has been said by soldiers of different organizations who were in the actual fighting that they did not even see a Y. M. C. A. man or any canteen supplies. This was undoubtedly true in many instances and came about because the Y. M. C. A. did not have sufficient funds with which to provide the personnel or transportation to supply all of the army units. The Y. M. C. A. keenly regretted its inability to fully extend its work. It went just as far as it could to remedy the situation, even so far as to run into debt last Fall to the extent of $15,000,000 before funds from the new campaign were received."

Some have criticised the Y. M. C. A., Mr. Perkins stated, for not giving away more articles, such as cigarettes, chocolate, and other articles, and he said its policy had been not to give away generally but only in special and needy cases. From June, 1918, to April, 1919, the Y. M. C. A. handled in France alone upward of 2,000,000,000 packages of cigarettes, 32,000,000 bars of chocolate, 18,000,000 cans of smoking tobacco, 50,000,000 cigars, 80,000,000 cans of jam, 29,000,000 packages of chewing gum, and 10,000,000 packages of candy. Regarding the organization's program in Europe the report states:

The Y. M. C. A.'s definite program in Europe from the beginning, and continuously, has been to bend every effort and use every dollar it could obtain to occupy the leisure time of the soldiers, and to do this with various forms of entertainment, athletics, worth-while educational activities, &c. Can there be any doubt that every father and mother, every wife and sister, and the men themselves, will approve the Y. M. C. A.'s course in this respect? Is it not infinitely better to do everything possible to occupy the leisure time and to fill the long, dreary evenings of the soldiers than to use the money in giving away a larger quantity of cigarettes, chocolates, and other similar articles?

Opened Factories in France.

The report dwells at length on the difficulties of transportation, pointing out the congestion on railroads in France during the period of hostilities and stating that it was necessary for the United States Government to have its own supplies take precedence over everything else. When hostilities ceased the Y. M. C. A. had only 700 trucks and automobiles in service, which did not begin to cover its needs, the report states. The railroads handled a vast amount of supplies for the Y. M. C. A., and from June, 1918, to February, 1919, 9,584 freight carloads of Y. M. C. A. supplies were hauled. In the month of October alone some of the principal items were 725 cars of general supplies, 66 cars of flour, 146 cars of sugar, 150 cars of tobacco, 95 cars of chocolate, 63 cars of raw materials for manufacture, and 144 cars of lumber and hut materials.

Early in the war, because of its inability to get certain supplies from the United States or elsewhere, the Y. M. C. A., through the courtesy and with the assistance of the French Government, succeeded in opening a number of factories, the Y. M. C. A. supplying the raw materials, supervising manufacture, and taking the entire product. The 20 biscuit factories, 13 chocolate factories, 3 candy factories, and 8 jam factories produced monthly 10,160,000 packages of biscuits, 7,400,000 tablets for drinking chocolate, 3,500,000 bars of sweet chocolate, 1,000,000 cans of milk chocolate, 3,800,000 bars of chocolate cream, 1,500,000 nut covered chocolate bars, 3,100,000 cartons of caramels, and 2,000,000 tins of jam.

On March 1, 1919, the Y. M. C. A. had in operation in France 567 buildings of various kinds which it had erected itself, 536 which it had leased, and 782 centres in tents and army buildings. At the beginning of its work in France the Y. M. C. A. organized an athletic department and took from the United States a large number of well-trained athletic directors. During 1918 and 1919 it provided over 2,250,000 athletic articles. It carried on various forms of entertainment on a colossal scale, operating a number of theatres in different places in France and providing the best plays that could be obtained without charge for admission or expense of any kind to the soldiers. At one time it had 702 American and 220 French entertainers, and the number estimated in attendance at its vaudeville shows was 800,000. More than 90,000 picture shows were given in France alone between August, 1917, and April, 1919, to audiences that aggregated 50,000,000 men, and not a cent of admission was charged.

You Never Pay More at Best's

WELCOME HOME!

NEW YORK'S OWN-WERE CERTAINLY GLAD TO SEE YOU BACK-

Little old New York welcomes you with open arms—she offers you the best she has and feels that the best is none too good for the heroes who made the "impossible" look easy and who shed new and greater glory on her fair name.

And when you come in to change the Khaki of war which you so nobly wore, for the clothes of peace, nothing but the best should be good enough for you; and nothing in clothes IS better or CAN BE better than

Kuppenheimer Clothes--

Hundreds of the new Waist-Seam Suits, the biggest style hit in many years; wonderfully smart "double-breasteds" which run them a close second—and innumerable others equally choice, though less extreme.

$30, $35, $40, $45 and Up to $80—Ready to Wear

Smart Low Shoes—$7, $8, $9 and $10—At 49th St. Only

63 DEAD MEN IN THE LIST

3 Missing and 979 Wounded Also Named—No List for the Marine Corps.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Three army casualty lists, which contained 1,045 names, were given out at the War Department today, bringing the total for the army up to 282,865, after an official recheck which takes account of changes of status and eliminates duplications. This total for the army includes 4,534 prisoners released from German prison camps and returned to the American Expeditionary Forces. No Marine Corps casualty list was given out today, but the total previously announced for that arm was 5,950. The total for the army and Marine Corps is now 288,815.

$100,000 for Cornell Professorship.

STRIKE LEADERS EXPELLED.

Masked Men Drive Capraro and Kleinman Out of Lawrence.

LAWRENCE, Mass., May 6.—Anthony J. Capraro, a member of the Textile Strike Committee, and Nathan Kleinman of New York, an organizer of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, were forcibly ejected from the city early today by masked men who took them from their hotel at the point of revolvers, according to stories told by the two men.

Capraro appeared at a house in Andover about daylight with little clothing, and showing several cuts and bruises. Kleinman later walked into the police station in Lowell with a blackened eye and a cut on one arm. He said he had been threatened with death if he ever returned to Lawrence.

Later Capraro left Andover for Boston with an attorney. Kleinman was reported to have gone to Boston from Lowell.

Capraro said there were about twenty men in the party which visited the hotel, and that after he had been forced to enter an automobile he was kicked and punched. The machine proceeded to an isolated spot in West Andover, where Capraro was put out and again beaten, he said. Kleinman, who was in another car, described his treatment as similar to that of Capraro.

James Silk, the night clerk on duty at the hotel, told the police that he was aroused early this morning by some one knocking at the door after the house had been closed for the night. When he responded twelve men demanded admission. They wore masks and showed revolvers to enforce their demands. They inquired as to the room occupied by strike leaders and, finding Capraro and Kleinman to be the only persons in the building connected with the strike, took them away in automobiles.

Welcome Home Boys!

WHILE you have been making sacrifices to protect the homes of our loved Allies across the seas, your Government has been making sacrifices to protect the homes of your loved ones here. It has furnished you life insurance on the monthly-income-payment plan at a very low cost, because it has believed you would understand your duty to be just as obvious to your home as the duty of your civilian friends to theirs. The Government now tells you, and we emphasize it, that this duty is just as much yours now as when you were in the service. If you drop this Government life insurance, you deprive those who have wept and prayed for you of a need as great today as when you donned the khaki. Don't do it. Hold Fast to Your Government Life Insurance.

"SPOILING THE SHIP FOR A PENNY'S WORTH OF TAR"

You know the old saying—Don't let this happen to our American Ship of State.

Our Country has never stood higher in the eyes of the world than it does today. A place second to none among the Nations has come to us—a place in the sun calling upon us Americans to be teachers and exponents instead of followers.

We fought to make the World a decent place to live in, now we must Pay to Keep the World a decent place to live in—the eyes of all people are upon us, we must put this Victory Loan over in double quick time.

Remember, 4¾%—a quarter more this time, and with America's whole resources behind you. Do it now. Do your bit toward steering our American Ship of State toward the greatest smooth sailing prosperity the world has known—and finish this war in a businesslike way.

GOVERNOR FORESEES HOUSING SOLUTION

Says the Reconstruction Commission Has a Plan That Promises to Meet Situation.

COLD TO EXTRA SESSION

Believes That Co-operation Under Present Laws Will Make Enactment of New Ones Unnecessary.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 6.—All probability of Governor Smith calling an extra session of the Legislature at the request of Mayor Hylan and other New York City authorities to relieve the rental and housing conditions in the greater city was dispelled today when the Governor declared in a statement issued before going to New York that a spirit of co-operation should be as expedient in bringing relief as creation of new laws.

The Governor also declared that the request of the New York officials had not been officially called to his attention, and that until it had been he would not definitely act on any suggestion for an extra session.

The Reconstruction Commission, created at the instance of Governor Smith, is making a study of the housing problem, and is considering measures of practical and immediate relief.

"In my message creating the Reconstruction Commission," said the Governor, "I requested that body to make a special study of the housing problems of the State. I asked them to make every endeavor to secure the fullest information, and after carefully studying it to make recommendations looking to the permanent welfare of the State.

"They advise me that their studies made thus far indicate that the increasing of rents and the shortage of housing are more than a local issue. Their inquiries, which are not limited to New York City, but are already covering the State, show that they will be state-wide.

"Many people have the mistaken idea that all reconstruction problems pressing for solution need an immediate change in our laws. As much can be done to solve some of these difficulties without new laws as with them, if we can bring about a spirit of co-operation.

"I am informed that the Reconstruction Commission has a plan for meeting the immediate housing situation that will afford an opportunity to the people who are able to take advantage of such privileges to co-operate with the State in solving the real crisis which I am advised exists. The commission is considering measures of practical and immediate relief, and it is essential that these measures be such as to result eventually in sufficient and better housing at moderate rental costs."

The plans of the Reconstruction Commission have not been publicly outlined yet. The Legislature has planned an investigation of the lack of houses and high rents, regardless of the inquiry by the Reconstruction Commission. The legislative inquiry was authorized by adoption of the Apeles resolution creating a joint committee to investigate the situation. Speaker Sweet of the Assembly has appointed his committee. Majority Leader Walters of the Senate, charged with the appointments in the upper house, has yet to make them.

KILL SHERIFF AND DEPUTY.

Alleged Car Thieves Suspected of Double Shooting.

KANSAS CITY, May 6.—The bodies of Sheriff Joseph C. Tolbert and Deputy John McDonald of Lafayette County were found today in the underbrush seven miles southeast of Lexington, Mo., with bullet holes through their heads. Apparently they had been badly beaten.

James C. Stableton, another deputy, fatally wounded, was found near the dead men. He was taken to a hospital.

A posse began search for the officers yesterday after their motor car had been found abandoned and bloodstained near Independence. The officers left Marshall, Mo., Sunday to bring three suspected automobile thieves to Kansas City.

The discovery of the car, together with three pairs of handcuffs, leads the authorities to believe that the prisoners killed the Sheriff and deputy. The officers were last seen with their prisoners near Higginsville late last night.

Canteen Burned at Camp Mills.

Fire yesterday noon practically destroyed the War Camp Community canteen and swimming pool at Camp Mills, L. I., entailing a loss of about $35,000, with some insurance. The property was built up about a year ago by the War Camp Community Service of Queens and Nassau Counties at Stewart Avenue and Avenue D. The canteen and pool will probably be rebuilt, it was said.

GREEKS SEND MESSAGE OF HOPE IN AMERICA

Believe Our Paris Delegates Will Support the Claims of Unredeemed Hellenism.

By Cable to the Editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATHENS, May 6.—The Central Committee of Unredeemed Hellenes is much gratified on hearing of the report of Nicholas Kyriakides, its special delegate to America, about the heartfelt sympathy and keen interest shown by the American people and President in the cause of unredeemed Hellenism. The committee deems it its duty to express through your valuable paper to the American people and press its deep gratitude for their hospitality and undivided support.

The committee firmly believes that the delegates of the American people at the Peace Conference at Paris will gladly make a favorable response to the most democratic aspirations of 3,000,000 unredeemed Greeks with Greek national consciousness, who have been groaning for five centuries under the heal of the unspeakable Turk, by confirming and ratifying the minimum claims of Hellenism presented at the Conference by Premier Venizelos.

Recent reliable reports from Turkey teach the civilized world that the Turks are continuing their oppressions with ferocious activity against inoffensive Greek and Armenian communities in Thrace and Asia Minor; and unless the Peace Conference brings forward a speedy settlement, the subject nations will have to lament more catastrophes.

GREEK CRY FROM MACEDONIA.

Refugees from Strumnitza Appeal for Protection from Italians.

SALONIKI, May 6.—Greeks from Strumnitza, in Macedonia, who have taken refuge here have addressed a note to President Wilson, Premier Lloyd George, and M. Venizelos, the Greek Prime Minister, begging them not to permit Italy, which has occupied Strumnitza, to follow the example of the Bulgarians and perpetrate cruelties against the Greeks there.

The note says that numerous sons of Greeks in Strumnitza enlisted in the Greek Army and shed their blood for civilization and for the union of Strumnitza to Greece.

ANTI-"DRY" RUMOR DENIED BY LABOR MEN

Say President Did Not Promise Gompers to Annul July 1 Law if Found Unpopular.

Through his secretary, Guy A. Oyster, Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, yesterday denied a report that President Wilson had promised the Federation delegates to the Paris International Labor Conference that he would set aside the provisions of the law making the country dry on July 1 if he found upon his return that the country really opposed the measure. Mr. Gompers is recovering at the Hotel Continental from injuries suffered in a taxicab accident last week.

"I was secretary of the mission," said Mr. Oyster, "and I can speak for the delegates and for Mr. Gompers in denying the report. Mr. Gompers' views on prohibition, however, are well known. It may be true that the President made such a promise, but if so it was not made to the delegates from the American Federation of Labor."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—No confirmation could be had in Washington tonight of the report that President Wilson had sent to this country through the American Federation of Labor delegation to the International Labor Conference a message that if upon his return to the United States he found the country unalterably opposed to prohibition, he would set aside the provisions of the law providing for wartime prohibition beginning July 1.

The White House announced that no such message had been given out there. Frank Morrison, Secretary of the Federation, had heard nothing of such a message. John R. Alpine of Chicago, one of the labor delegates to the Paris conference, who is now in Washington, said he had no knowledge of the message. It was intimated at Federation headquarters that if the President had sent any such message it would have been sent to Samuel Gompers, now ill in New York.

The labor delegation at Paris was composed of Mr. Gompers, Mr. Alpine, William Green and Frank Duffy, both of Indianapolis, and James Duncan of Quincy, Mass.

ANNUAL SESSION OF MASONS OPENS

WILL USE ENGLISH ONLY

Edict Provides None of Ritual or Record Shall Be in Alien Language.

The 138th annual convention of the Grand Lodge of Masons of the State of New York began yesterday in Masonic Temple, Twenty-third Street and Sixth Avenue. The chief events on the program were the address of Grand Master William S. Farmer of Syracuse, the presiding officer, and the selection of various committees. During the session, which will end tomorrow, the Overseas Commission, representing Masonry in the United States, and of which Past Grand Master Townsend Scudder of Brooklyn is the Chairman, will make its report. The commission went to France in January.

In his address Grand Master Farmer spoke on the part taken by the Masons in the war, and paid a tribute to the late Theodore Roosevelt, who was a member of Matinicock Lodge 806.

The Grand Master said that after this country entered the war the craft were unanimous in the opinion that it should take part in relief work overseas. To this end the commission headed by Past Grand Master Scudder was formed. Then, he said, unexpected obstacles arose to retard the commission in its preliminary work in Washington. These, however, were overcome. The account of the work of the commission, he said, will be made public and become a part of the proceedings of the session.

The outline of a tentative plan of an organization of the Masonic Service Association of the United States was adopted. This outline provides that all Masonic jurisdictions of the United States shall be entitled to membership therein on equal footing on expressing their approval of the constitution and acceptance of the responsibility and privileges therein. Any member shall be entitled to withdraw at any time on ninety days' notice. The objects include financial relief and Masonic visitation, particularly in times of disaster and distress.

Grand Master Farmer called attention to his edict that after July 1 only the English language is to be used in his jurisdiction, in the ritual and in recording its minutes. "An alien language," he said, "gives an alien viewpoint, and if this country is to endure we must have nothing but the American viewpoint."

The last year was one of the most prosperous in the history of the organization in this State, both in the number of new members and the amount of moneys received. There were seven new lodges instituted and the members number more than 213,000, an increase of 3,484. The receipts from all sources amounted to $220,038 as compared with $208,853 the previous year.

Grand Master Farmer gave a dinner at the Hotel McAlpin in the evening to members of his staff and to guests of the Grand Lodge. About 129 persons attended. The speakers, in addition to Grand Master Farmer, were George L. Schoonover of Anamosa, Iowa; Thomas Perry of Buffalo, Charles H. Johnson of Albany, and Justice S. Nelson Sawyer of Palmyra.

SOMERS SILENT ABOUT JOB.

Won't Say Whether He Will Run Again for Education President.

The Board of Education will elect its President and Vice President for the ensuing year at its annual meeting on Tuesday, May 13. Arthur S. Somers has been President for one year and four months, having been elected unanimously at the meeting of the board in January, 1918, and re-elected unanimously in May, 1918, for one year.

President Somers's health has not been good recently, and it was rumored that he intended to retire from the board. He admitted yesterday that he had been seriously considering such a step, but had been prevailed upon to remain owing to the many important questions still pending. He declined to say whether he would again be a candidate for the Presidency. In case of his refusal to accept the office, Anning S. Prall of Richmond Borough may be chosen.

Welch's Grapelade

I just love it!

No wonder. Everybody does. And children particularly. The liking for the taste of fresh grapes is universal. And that is the appealing thing about Grapelade. It has the real grape flavor, with all the richness and juice of the whole ripe fruit, minus only skins, seeds and acid crystals.

With Grapelade spread on bread or crackers, the children don't ask for butter. Grapelade is so satisfying. And it is good for them.

Try Grapelade on your table tonight. Or tomorrow morning. It's mighty fine on hot biscuits or muffins.

At your grocers in 15 ounce glass jars at 35c; 25 ounce tins, 50c.

WOMEN ORGANIZE IN WEST.

Open Headquarters to Further the Suffrage Amendment.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 6.—Western headquarters have been opened by the National Woman's Party in Chicago and San Francisco. From these centres the women voters are to be kept in touch with the suffrage situation in Congress, and their influence organized to secure the one vote still lacking in the Senate and the quick passage of the amendment as soon as the extra session is called.

Mrs. Abby Scott Baker of Washington, political Chairman of the party, has just returned from the West. "Western women," she said, "are alive to the fact that if the amendment is not passed at once the chances are it will not be passed until immediately before the 1920 elections, too late for ratification to permit women to vote in those elections."

Women voters are watching both parties attentively to see whether the Republicans or the Democrats will give the last vote needed to pass the amendment.

HOSTESS TO SOLDIERS.

Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., Buys Out Ziegfeld 9 o'Clock Revue.

Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., was hostess last night to several hundred soldiers recently returned from overseas. She bought out the New Amsterdam Roof for the Ziegfeld 9 o'clock Revue. Dinner was served to the soldiers at 7:30, and there was dancing before the revue.

Accommodations were made for 600 soldiers at dinner, but many of them did not arrive until time for the performance.

A HOT SPOT Chalmers flattens the hills

A GREAT many persons enjoy the rare luxury of fooling themselves about the hill-climbing ability of their prided cars.

If you put enough power underneath the bonnet you'll get over any hill this side of the Alps.

But big engines don't make the best hill-climbers any more than a bear can climb a tree faster than a cat.

Take the Hot Spot Chalmers. You don't have to make up your mind a quarter of a mile away to turn loose the power for a fast run up the hill.

You can slow down and take it at a slow speed. For it "hangs on" and goes over without a whimper. That is the real test of a hill-climbing car. Try it.

Just why a Chalmers flattens the hills is explained in three major words: Hot Spot and Ram's-horn. These simple little devices mean that for every pint of gas that goes into the engine out comes every bit of power that Mother Nature stored away in that pint.

It means you're getting more for your money every time the engine "turns over" than with any other car.

Which ought to make anyone buying a car now take a look at this present day Hot Spot Chalmers.

TWELVE ARMY CAMPS SOLD FOR $548,194

RECEIVED FORTY-FOUR BIDS

Storage Warehouses and Hospital Buildings in Most Cases Reserved by the Government.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Approval of the sale of twelve army camps—eight National Guard concentration sites and four small miscellaneous camps—for $548,194.43 was announced today by Acting Secretary Crowell.

The material covered by the sale consisted almost exclusively of hastily constructed buildings and some stored equipment. In the case of buildings, the Government had reserved for its own use the base hospitals and storage warehouses.

Forty-four bids were received from thirty-five individuals and corporations, the largest single proposal being from one wrecking company, which offered to take all the camps for about $540,000. This proposal was rejected, largely because of the desire of the department to turn over the camps to cities in the vicinity.

The City of Montgomery, Ala., obtained Camp Sheridan, and the State of North Carolina will take over Camp Polk. The other camps went to individuals and firms, except Camp Kendrick, N. J., which was withdrawn from the auction and is to be retained for the navy, and Camp Sevier, S. C., for which no acceptable bid was received.

The successful bidders in the other cases were: Camp Bowie, Texas, sold to Henry Marks & Son, Indianapolis, Ind.; Camp Colt, Penn, to Lewis Brothers, Rock Island, Ill.; Camp Hancock, Ga., to J. P. Mulherin, Augusta, Ga.; Camp Logan, Texas, to G. T. Brown, Houston, Texas; North Camp Jackson, S. C., to Lewis Brothers, Rock Island, Ill.; Camp Wadsworth, S. C., to Frank Hodges, Spartanburg, S. C.; Camp Wheeler, Ga., to E. Ness, Savannah, Ga.; Camp Shelby, Miss., to S. Steinberg Company, no address given; Camp Beauregard, La., to J. W. Alexander, Alexandria, La.

In the case of Camp Beauregard the successful bidder must guarantee to the State without cost the buildings and improvements sufficient for one regimental camping area for use of the State troops. At Camp Hancock the underground improvements must be left intact for the benefit of the community. At Camp Polk, N. C., the buildings were sold to the State for use in connection with the State penitentiary. The City of Spartanburg will be given the sewage and water systems at Camp Wadsworth.

"The proposals received were as a rule very satisfactory," Assistant Secretary Crowell said today. "The National Guard camps were hastily built, and contained only tent floors, mess shacks, and a few administration buildings besides the hospital and storage warehouse, which in most cases were reserved by the Government. The improvements at these camps had served their purpose in housing the troops during the period of training. On the basis of having been filled twice, these camps served 800,000 troops at a cost for construction of $30 per capita.

TELLS OF ARMY SHOE FRAUD

Employe of Bay State Concern Testifies at Trial of Official.

BOSTON, May 6.—Thomas Sherwood, formerly a leather buyer for the A. J. Bates Shoe Company of Webster, testified in the Federal Court today that Frank L. Sears, Vice President and General Manager of the company, told him that no money would be made on a contract for army shoes except by "skinning" on the leather. Sherwood and Sears were placed on trial charged with conspiring to defraud the Government and to bribe inspectors.

Sherwood pleaded guilty. He was the first witness called in the trial of Sears. He said that Sears told him he had not included overhead and salesmanship charges in figuring on the contract, and that the only profit he would make would be by "skinning" on leather. Sherwood testified that Sears told him not to employ strangers at the factory, as he understood that the Government was placing shoemakers, who were acting as secret agents, in factories which were making army shoes. The Bates company contract was for 114,000 pairs of shoes at an average price of $4.60 a pair.

A Word With Your Twenty-Four Dollar Island

I COME down from a mountain to your twenty-four-dollar island Peter Minuit bought for twenty-four dollars, which is raising forty thousand dollars a minute now, all day, all night, three weeks, for America, for the fate of a world.

Everybody knows what New York banks can do.

What everybody wonders is—what crowds in the streets of New York will do.

In Germany the Kaiser and others have remarked with a thousand guns, with poisonous gas and submarines, with four million dead men, that crowds cannot do things.

Forty nations and the crowds in the streets of a hundred thousand cities have leaped up around a world to deny it!

Inch by inch back through the door of the hell they had made for us, into the hell they had made for themselves, crowds have driven back Germans!

The crowds in the streets of New York have cast like a vow, cast like a sacrament on the sacred soil of France, seven thousand dead men to prove that crowds can think, that crowds can be deep, that crowds can be sincere and do things!

I come down from my mountain to look up to the crowds in the street!

I have seen the crowds stand in the Avenue and weep! I have seen the crowds stand in the Avenue and cheer!

The world is watching the crowds this week in New York!

Forty nations, oh crowds of New York, are looking in your faces!

POST OFFICE PROFIT AND LOSS.

It is a pity that the personal aspect of the Post Office's troubles are so much emphasized. The imputation of personal blame carries with it the suggestion that success would have been possible under another Postmaster General. The case against Government ownership and operation of public utilities is strong in proportion that its faults are such that no Postmaster General could make it succeed. The more the Post Office undertakes the worse will be its record, whoever is Postmaster General. It is not necessarily a personal reproach to Mr. BURLESON that he failed where the French and British Post Office Departments failed before him. If every personal charge against him were dismissed, the argument on principle and precedent would remain.

The British Post Office took over the telegraph in the sixties and made a profit in the first year of public operation, before the momentum of private efficiency was exhausted. There has been a deteriorating record for each year since, down to 1919. From the second year until now there has been an unbroken failure of profit in varying degrees. At first there was merely a failure to earn a profit on the payment which bought out the private owners. Later there was failure even to earn operating expenses. Englishmen have six-penny telegrams, it is true, but they pay for them "through the nose." The bill was recently estimated at $200,000,000 deficit, and comes to them with their taxes, not when they are sending the telegrams. There is a greater deficiency in service than in profit, and the record will grow worse as it grows longer.

The reason for preferring to emphasize this feature of the Post Office's failure with the wire services is that Director General HINES's statement, issued last night, reported the loss on Government operation of the railroads for the first quarter of this year as $192,000,000. In no year of peace did the Government ever have a record of deficiency at the rate of a half billion dollars. But that loss will be trivial compared with the loss through adding Government operation of the wire services to the railway loss. It is idle to suggest that the conditions were unfavorable to Government operation. They were exceptionally favorable, as was said by Director General MCADOO when he started along the road the Postmaster General traveled later, and as is apparent from the great press of profitable business owing to war conditions. It is the cost side of the account which wrecks Government operation, under which costs and profits are released from the requirements of the balance sheet. It is doubly untrue that inexhaustible funds can create profit. It is not true that the Treasury is inexhaustible. On the contrary, Government operation on the methods of anybody else than Mr. MCADOO or Mr. HINES and Mr. BURLESON would not give profit or satisfaction even if the Treasury funds were inexhaustible. Director General HINES gave better satisfaction as a private operator under handicap of regulation by the Interstate Commerce Commission than he ever will as a public operator. The reason is that he esteems himself released from the obligations which compelled him to give satisfaction as a private operator. As a private operator he would blush for the sort of finance which he now practices.

The Post Office was never under regulation like the railways, and never has kept such accounts as were required from the railways. Mr. BURLESON says that the Post Office "passed" permanently from a deficiency to a "surplus" with his fixing of postal parcel rates. How can he prove it? Who can deny it when the Post Office cannot show what its costs are, having deliberately arranged so that its receipts and costs cannot be calculated? His Fourth Assistant says that there is a loss of $51,000,000 on the rural mail routes. How can he distinguish this loss from the loss on second-class mail zone rates, or how can he say how much of the profit on first-class rates is due to the loss on the zone rates? No Postmaster General ever had his costs and profits certified on any businesslike method of accounting. No Postmaster General ever will give service justifying the losses hidden in muddled accounts. Another Postmaster General might fail in a less irritating manner, or might even achieve such measure of success as to commit the Government to the policies with which the Postmaster General identified himself. That would be the worst blow of all. The country is indebted to the Postmaster General for bankrupting the Government operation of public utilities before he bankrupted the Treasury. We are not among those who consider his administration a failure, in this respect at least. We offer our congratulations to Mr. MACKAY and our condolences to Mr. VAIL. We have approved of Mr. VAIL'S views on public regulation of private operation of utilities, and liked him better in that capacity than as a public operator without any regulation. Who shall regulate Government operation? And what a calamity it would be without regulation!

THE PARADE AND THE BONDS.

Those who read the reports of yesterday's parade of "New York's Own" and remember that today is the anniversary of the Lusitania murders will be bound to admit that the soldiers have done their part better than those who are so slow about paying for the work which they ordered. The soldiers' part is finished, and finished in a manner entitling them to hold their heads high. It is not their fault that their uniforms are owed for and that there are not in hand funds for bringing back the other million who fought beside them. As the account stood when they were marching up the avenue yesterday the city which vaunts its pride in them had paid only 30 per cent. of the money price to qualify as patriots. Of our forty-eight States, only four have yet been reported as 100 per cent. true either to their country or to the defenders of democracy. Of the dozen Federal Reserve districts, not one has filled the subscription which was opened with the slogan "Finish the job this week!"

We know the reasons and the excuses for a condition which will remain a reproach after it has been removed from the record. The loan is going to be covered, of course. The only war loan which failed was Germany's last, offered after its defeat. Everybody knows that the Victory notes are the world's best promises to pay, inferior to none in moral sanction and supported by the greatest wealth ever commanded by any nation. But that adds to the record of reproach that the average of the country's subscription is only 40 per cent. and that the best record, that of St. Louis, is only 67.99 per cent. We are no prouder of the 77th Division than it is our right and duty to be, but the men of the division can hardly feel the same way about their own city and State, and even their country. There are no unpaid bills in their record. Some of them paid to the uttermost. All met their obligations at sight. They are 100 per cent. Americans.

Of all the boroughs of Greater New York, Brooklyn alone has met its obligations, with the help of banks whose elderly Presidents bought a million dollars apiece in consideration of being kissed in public by a prima donna. She rolled up millions for the Victory Loan as gayly as she ever rolled down the hills in Prospect Park, which was her childhood's playground. When it comes to buying bonds New York will outbid Brooklyn, the erstwhile Cinderella borough of the city, now a borough of banks as well as of churches. Our banks, when their time comes, will complete the subscription. At latest reports they were scores of millions ahead of the next district, and they had not yet begun to move up in the home stretch, with their powers well in reserve. Once more we are proud of the 77th, and we hope that the 77th will be proud of us, too, after this week.

NEW HAMPSHIRE CANDIDATES.

The State of New Hampshire is presented with an opportunity right now which it has not had since the days of FRANKLIN PIERCE. It may give its support to the candidacy of a native son for the Presidency.

Thus The Manchester Union and Major FRANK KNOX, introducing the candidacy for President of General LEONARD WOOD, a citizen of Kansas, born in the Granite State at Winchester. But why "since the days of FRANKLIN PIERCE"? Has the nomination of HORACE GREELEY, a native of New Hampshire, for President in 1872 been quite erased from the memory of Manchester? New Hampshire was far from supporting that native son. In 1808 JOHN LANGDON, an eminent native son of a famous New Hampshire family, got nine electoral votes for President, six from Vermont and three from Ohio. His own State knew him not. In 1836 Massachusetts gave her fourteen votes to her adopted son, DANIEL WEBSTER. New Hampshire forgot that most illustrious of native sons and voted for VAN BUREN.

In 1848 New Hampshire was true to the native son, LEWIS CASS of Michigan, and again to FRANKLIN PIERCE in 1852. In the latter year another New Hampshire man, JOHN P. HALE, was the Free Soil nominee for President. HENRY WILSON of Massachusetts, another New Hampshire native son, was the Republican candidate for Vice President in 1872. Doubtless other wanderers from New Hampshire have been candidates in national conventions. It is our impression that Judge LEVI WOODBURY received some votes at Democratic conventions. However that may be, it seems curious that Mr. GREELEY'S nomination should have passed out of the mind of Manchester.

D'ANNUNZIO'S SPEECH.

Mr. DURANTY'S remarkable account of D'ANNUNZIO'S speech at the Augusteum in Rome leaves no doubt in the mind that it must have been great in the effect it produced on the audience. But it does not leave the impression that the speech itself was greater than many others. D'ANNUNZIO spoke to a crowd already thrilling with emotion and spoke the right words. His picture of the marching legions of the dead was indeed beautiful, but delivered in the course of a lecture at Carnegie Hall, for instance, no matter who spoke the words, they would have been admired without leaving the stirring effect which Mr. DURANTY describes.

Mr. BRYAN'S "Cross of Gold" speech produced such an effect that the crowd went frantic and carried him around the Convention Hall on their shoulders. It is all very well to say that the speech was tawdry and the audience fanatical. He spoke the words that fitted his purpose and the occasion, that filled the measure of the unspoken thoughts trying to form themselves in the minds of the audience. The same thing was true of ROBERT G. INGERSOLL'S "Plumed Knight" speech nominating BLAINE for President at the Chicago Convention of 1876. HENRY WARD BEECHER, in the course of an anti-slavery speech, seized some shackles that had once fettered a slave, threw them to the floor, and stamped upon them, and the audience went mad. If the audience had not been already thrilled with hatred of slavery and longing to have its thoughts formulated for it, the action would have fallen flat, it might have been laughable.

The fact has been proved many times in national conventions in this country, where oratorical devices that had been immensely successful on the stump failed of the hoped-for effect. No United States Senator celebrated for firebrand oratory ever tries it in the Senate. Conspicuous examples of this were JOSEPH B. FORAKER, who on the stump was known as "Fire Alarm FORAKER," but who was so conservative a speaker in the Senate that he was even dull, and JOSEPH W. BAILEY, a great stump orator, who in the Senate was an argumentative constitutional lawyer.

"But now," says Mr. DURANTY, "they are caught in the spell of D'ANNUNZIO'S magic." We would not deny for a moment that D'ANNUNZIO is a verbal magician, but the magic was first in the hearts of the audience. There are places, perhaps even in Italy itself, where D'ANNUNZIO would not make that speech, or where, if he did, his magic would weave no spell.

A GOOD PEACE.

How can Mr. CLEMENCEAU dare to say that the peace made at Paris is "a good peace"? He must be speaking ignorantly, under the illusion that a peace satisfactory and salutary to France and to the rest of the free world is a "good peace." In this country there are specialists in prejudice who know better. They know that no negotiation, transaction, peace or war in which Mr. WILSON has had a hand can be good. Senator REED, Senator POINDEXTER, and Senator BORAH should appoint themselves a Committee of Three and correct Mr. CLEMENCEAU'S unhappy error.

THE Y. M. C. A. AND THE ARMY.

The work of the Y. M. C. A. at the front has been the object of so much criticism, honest as well as unintelligent, that the report of its services now rendered by Mr. GEORGE W. PERKINS, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the War Work Council, will be read with special interest by contributors who, to quote Mr. PERKINS, "had to deny themselves in order to give to the cause."

It has been charged that this benevolent organization drove hard bargains with the soldiers, was at no great pains to look after their creature comforts, had no "free list," and in its relations with them was "cold as charity"; also, that the men it employed were often not distinguished for helpfulness and courtesy. Comparisons were made to the discredit of the Y. M. C. A. with other auxiliary organizations in France that labored behind the lines to encourage the soldier to "carry on" by ministering to his wants and providing him with amusements.

If what was charged against the Y. M. C. A. be true, it was a monumental failure in the war; but it could have been a great deal of a success without rendering 100 per cent. of acceptable service. The impression made by this report of Mr. PERKINS it that the Y. M. C. A. workers, rapidly mobilized for duty and equipped under difficulties of supply and transportation, proved themselves indispensable in their own field to the army, and, fairly judged, laid it under a debt that is ill requited by intolerant and querulous criticisms. That all the men employed were fitted by experience and temperament for personal contact with the soldiers of the army Mr. PERKINS by no means maintains. On the contrary, there were incompetents, those with little breeding or tact, and some "black sheep"; the latter, few in number, could not be trusted with funds, and two of them have been prosecuted. But 150,000 candidates were called and 11,229 chosen, a winnowing-out process that speaks for itself.

It seems to have escaped the attention of some of the critics of the Y. M. C. A. at the front that General PERSHING asked it, on Aug. 20, 1917, to undertake the management of the army canteens. At the time "it was "extremely difficult to get supplies as "well as to get men who were accus- "tomed to handling, distributing, "selling, and accounting for such "supplies." When the War Department could not provide freight space the Y. M. C. A. had to pay for it at high rates. This must be remembered by those who have complained of Y. M. C. A. prices for articles furnished the soldiers. It never solicited contributions for the purpose of giving away canteen supplies. This was its policy, says Mr. PERKINS:

> To sell canteen supplies at as near cost as possible, and to bend every effort, when fighting was in progress, to furnish the men at the front with supplies free of charge where it was at all possible to get the goods to them.

As a matter of fact, the Y. M. C. A. canteen operations, it is reported, will show "a substantial loss." Soldiers have declared that the organization was niggardly in handing around cigarettes, chocolates, &c. Mr. PERKINS submits that the army authorities do not favor a "free list," holding that "it is far better for the "men to spend their money on such "articles than to spend it in other "ways." Between June, 1918, and April, 1919, the Y. M. C. A. handled in France alone 2,000,000,000 cigarettes, 32,000,000 bars of chocolate, 18,000,000 cans of smoking tobacco, 50,000,000 cigars, 60,000,000 cans of jam, 29,000,000 packages of chewing gum, and 10,000,000 boxes of candy. It was running a canteen by request of the commanding General and not playing Santa Claus. The canteen operations, be it remembered, were conducted at a loss.

The Y. M. C. A. was a colossal business institution in France. It operated biscuit, chocolate, jam, and candy factories; it manufactured writing paper for the army; it rented or actually built 1,183 structures, that is to say "huts," storehouses, concert halls, hotels, and churches. Did it do anything for nothing? A great deal. Its athletic department supplied the soldiers with 575,000 baseballs, 140,000 baseball bats, 65,000 fielders' gloves, 85,000 indoor baseballs, and 75,000 footballs. It entertained 800,000 men at vaudeville shows, and provided 702 American and 220 French entertainers. In March, 1919, the Y. M. C. A. had 95 troupes "on the road" in France. This cost the soldiers nothing. Furthermore, 90,000 picture shows were given to audiences of 50,000,000 men between August, 1917, and August, 1918. The things that the Y. M. C. A. has done gratuitously to entertain and cheer the soldiers in France would make a much longer list. General PERSHING has expressed his thanks in moving terms. It should be enough. "The Y. M. C. A. undoubtedly made mistakes," says Mr. PERKINS, "but what it tried to do "was to respond to every call that "the army made on it."

THE LOST BATTALION.

Was the Lost Battalion lost? It all depends on what you mean by lost. General ROBERT ALEXANDER, commander of the 77th Division, seems to have an idea that there is something derogatory in the term, and that the American people have got a wrong idea about it. He proceeds to remove this erroneous impression from the popular mind. But the American people understand just what the Lost Battalion did, and have been filled with admiration for it.

The General seems to think the popular impression is that Major WHITTLESEY'S command went blundering off somewhere into a wood without knowing where it was going and disappeared, neither the division nor its General knowing its whereabouts for five days. That is how he interprets the word "lost." The truth is that "lost" is simply a picturesque word, a euphonious figure of speech. "Cut-off Battalion" or "Surrounded Battalion" is entirely too clumsy to be a catchword. He says that the battalion reached a designated objective and held it until it could be rescued—or relieved, since the General objects to the word "rescued" as much as he does to the word "lost."

The battalion was lost in just the sense in which the admiring American people use the word. It got to the place where it was sent, and was cut off from the rest of the division. It carried only two days' rations and had to hold out for five days, surrounded by the enemy in great force and under constant fire. Demands for surrender were repelled with profanity. It was rescued, just as a besieged town is rescued. When a relieving army marches to the rescue of a beleaguered city or fortress, it is not to be taken as meaning that the army does not know where the city or fortress is, and is plunging this way and that in an effort to find it. The garrisons of Lucknow or of Mafeking were certainly rescued; and to say so implies neither that there was any lack of courage in the rescued nor any ignorance of their whereabouts in the minds of the rescuers.

Of one thing General ALEXANDER may be assured. The glorious nickname of the Lost Battalion will last as long as the story of the war itself lasts. The American people take pride in the battalion and in the name they have given it, and it will no more disappear from common speech than will the equally glorious name of the Old Contemptibles.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

The Luxury Taxes.

On second thought the Treasury will not require shopkeepers to itemize their tax collections under the eighteen sections of the so-called luxury taxes, and the uncertain number of other sections distributed through the war tax law. One total will suffice, instead of eighteen or an uncertain number more. Also, on second thought, the Treasury threatens fine and imprisonment against those guilty of eating ice cream cones outside of an "ice cream parlor," or buying fizz water from a grocer instead of from a "soda water fountain." A reading of the law suggested that perhaps economically minded citizens might not think it wicked to obey Mr. KITCHIN'S law strictly according to its letter, and now Washington dispatches report that stories of such evil conduct are reaching the Treasury "from all over the country."

It seems that the law about buying liquor to be drunk on and off the premises was thought to govern the purchase and consumption of ice cream cones and sundaes. So perhaps it may, if followed strictly, and not in such manner as to create presumption of dodging taxes when the Treasury needs the money. Ice cream and soda water may be bought in containers without paying taxes, if the containers are carried so far away that there is a presumption against the intention to patronize the "fountain" or "parlor." Far be it from us to pretend finality in the interpretation of these nice points. We have no idea whether a sale of ginger ale in a bottle satisfies the Treasury notion of a lawful container. But we strongly advise against sending a boy in to buy an ice cream cone with felonious intent to eat it outside the "parlor." Our guess is that the boy would eat the cone and the Treasury would not get the tax. Also we think it dangerous to have a sundae handed through a window—the Treasury detectives might see you. It would be better to hire a tax lawyer before than after such dangerous enterprises as buying luxuries under the Treasury's threat of "fine of $10,000, or imprisonment for one year, or both."

Some Thoughts on Next Year's Convention.

"Unless all signs fail," says The Washington Star, "the next national conventions will attract the largest crowds ever seen at such meetings." This is a prediction made every four years, and we should like to know what the "signs" are that promise any greater degree of realization than usual. The only one The Star advances is that new men and new issues will be dealt with, the issues being ones never heard of before. All that was true in 1916, to say nothing of 1864 and other years long past. There is not likely to be any greater excitement than there was in 1912. Of course, the issues then were not comparable to those of today, but people were just as much interested in them. No man stays away from a fight because some time in the future there may be a more important one.

As for the "new men," The Star does not think there will be any at the Democratic Convention unless the President is determined not to accept another nomination. If he would like one he can have it, and, says The Star, in that case there will be another for Mr. MARSHALL. This last phase of the situation has not been mentioned before that we remember, but it seems only fair. Mr. MARSHALL has grown a good deal in popular estimation since he took office, because he is better understood. He has an unconventional way of talking that at first led to some misunderstandings and heartburnings; but that is because he is "racy of the soil." It may be suggested, however, that if Mr. WILSON is renominated he will be pretty apt to name his own running mate, just as Mr. BRYAN did in 1908, when he had the convention in his hands.

The Star is nebulous about where the conventions are likely to be held. It is unfortunate that there should be any doubt about it. Chicago is the one city best fitted to hold a political convention, no easy job for any town. Next comes St. Louis, which used to have some disadvantages that have now been removed by the erection of a Convention Hall that is the best in the country. For the first time, thanks to its constructors, everybody can see and hear everything. If the Convention Hall were the only consideration, St. Louis should have both conventions without question. But there are other considerations, and Chicago still remains pre-eminently the best convention town. However, convention cities are selected not for the comfort of the delegates and the crowds and the expedition of business, but for political and financial reasons.

A CALL FROM UNCLE SAM.

Sing a song of victory, sing it loud and clear,
Uncle Sam is calling, you must answer "Here!"
Dig a little deeper down, lend him just once more,
Don't you know, can't you see, what you're lending for?
Never mind your party, never mind your creed;
All that you should think about is your country's need.
Never let the Stars and Stripes trail its folds in shame,
Just because a stingy soul didn't play the game.
Pay your debt of honor, pay it like a man.
They gave all, would you give less? Answer if you can.
Over there in Flanders Fields, "where the poppies blow,"
Lie the men who died for you—you who couldn't go:
So you're asked to do your part, dare you answer nay?
Buy a Bond! Buy a Bond! Buy a Bond today!

WHAT IS TO BE DONE WITH THE RAILWAYS?

Further Consideration of a Plan of Reorganization Which Would Combine Competition and Control.

By HENRY W. TAFT.
Second Article.

In considering the grouping of the railways under the plan outlined in my previous article, it would be necessary in each region to take into consideration the character of the population and industries, the climate, the probable direction of development in sparsely settled parts of the country, and, most important of all, the maintenance and development of a healthy competition between groups of roads in contiguous regions. Competition within each group would, of course, have to be eliminated. Save in exceptional cases, splitting up (longitudinally) of existing and established trunk lines would have to be avoided.

Consolidation of the roads within each region, through voluntary exchange of existing securities for those of new Federal regional corporations, will be induced by (a) giving regulatory jurisdiction of interstate transactions to a local Federal commission, (b) making such Government guarantee of interest and dividends upon bonds and stock of the regional corporation as will make an exchange of securities advantageous, and (c) clothing each regional corporation with powers of condemnation. There is little doubt that a plan can be devised which will hold out such inducements to the large systems in each group that a consolidation into a single system owned by a Federal corporation can be accomplished without resorting, save in exceptional cases, to the right of eminent domain.

The complete abolition of competition resulting from Government ownership would discourage initiative and ambition on the part of railroad managers, would affect the morale of railroad employes, and would remove the most easily available comparative tests of results of operation. But a well-balanced group of railroads within a single region would not be essentially different from one of our great industrial combinations, and economies would be made possible on such a system through standardization of methods, reduction of expense of administration, and the elimination of expensive and unprofitable facilities which competition has created; and these results would more than compensate for the disadvantage of discontinuing intra-regional competition. If fifteen or twenty groups were established the elimination of competition in any one group would be far less in proportion to the entire transportation business of the country than that effected by such combinations as the United States Steel Corporation, the Packers' combination, the Standard Oil Company, the American Sugar Refining Company, &c.

But even if efficiency in the service may to some extent be impaired by the proposed combinations, that is a disadvantage which is far outweighed by the countervailing advantages. Without some grouping system under the direct supervision of regional commissions, the benefits of a Government guarantee of securities and a stabilization of rates and wages can probably not be obtained, for if the Government is to assume a larger obligation in relation to these matters, it must establish a supervising organization which will be adequate for the protection of its interests as a partner in the enterprise. But neither the supervision by the Government nor the assured return upon the securities of the regional companies need interfere with the quality of service rendered to the public. Such a grouping of roads can be made as to maintain active competition between the groups, and it is not probable that there will be any great damage through elimination of competition within the groups themselves. It is fair to say that it is those who advocate the preservation of the existing corporations that lay the greatest stress upon the supreme importance of competition; and their desire to restore the old order of things may lead them to overaccentuate the point. But it is evident that the public will not concede the advantages of a partial copartnership arrangement unless many of the existing lines, perhaps unnecessary altogether, or, in any event, maintained under uneconomical conditions, are so consolidated and managed as to avoid undue waste.

Mapping Out Regions.

It would be premature to attempt now to map out regions. This is a matter that must be dealt with by the Government and traffic and other experts. But an illustration will serve to promote discussion:

In the territory east of the Mississippi River and north of the Ohio River, the east and west traffic between New York and New England on the east and Chicago on the west would be the determining factor in fixing the boundaries of regions. The natural grouping would centre around the New York Central and the Pennsylvania systems. With the former would be united the Delaware & Hudson, the Erie, and all the New England lines (unless it were deemed advisable to have the two lines in competition through to Boston, in which case the New York Central could group its lines around the Boston & Albany and the Pennsylvania around the New Haven.) With the Pennsylvania would be grouped all the roads in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, the Baltimore & Ohio, and perhaps the Chesapeake & Ohio. Thus would be created two great systems competing for the business between Chicago and the East and able to adopt a multitude of economies now impossible in the use of their numerous lines. South of Washington groups would naturally trend more nearly north and south; and the Southern and the Louisville & Nashville would probably be the backbones of two competing groups, while the Illinois Central and the Missouri Pacific would be the natural foundation on which to build two groups competing for the business from Chicago to the South.

A proper division of the entire country would probably result in about fifteen or twenty groups.

Plans for Guaranteeing Income.

A number of methods have been proposed by which a minimum net return may be guaranteed by the Government. One of these methods seeks by Congressional edict to define what is a "reasonable rate," and to determine what shall be the net return upon investments in railroad property, while another would arrive at the same result by requiring that rates be fixed at a figure which will produce a minimum net return. Under still another plan it is suggested that out of gross earnings there be first set aside fixed proportions to be applied preferentially to the payment of interest and dividends on new securities. All such plans, when analyzed, will be found to be predicated upon an assumption by the Government of an obligation, either directly or indirectly, to fix a rate schedule and to deal with wages and other costs in such manner that there shall be net income of a certain amount applicable to the payment of dividends and interest upon the securities of the companies. In other words, all of such suggestions involve a Government guarantee of an income upon property invested in railroads. If I am right in this, it results that whichever plan is adopted, there must be some method for appraising the property investment as a basis for estimating the income which is to be guaranteed upon it. That being so, it seems to me that the direct guarantee of the income upon the securities of the regional companies will be preferable. In the first place, it is simpler and will be better understood. In the second place, it will avoid the uncertainties attaching to action by Congress or the Interstate Commerce Commission in relation to rates and the complicated financial structures suggested by some of the plans which contemplate intricate accountings not easily understood. The indirect form of Government guarantee under such plans would undoubtedly make railroad securities less marketable than if the guarantee were direct, and to that extent the new companies would fail to receive the full advantage which would undoubtedly accrue from a direct guarantee. The credit of railroad stock and bonds with a direct Government guarantee would undoubtedly be as high as that of Government bonds themselves. The rate of income guaranteed should be fixed so that both stock and bonds would realize one hundred cents on the dollar, thus avoiding destructive discounts, commissions, and expenses which have for many years grievously burdened the less prosperous railroads.

Provision for Contingencies.

It is quite possible that in working out a plan like that proposed it might be necessary for the protection of the Government to put it in a position where by foreclosure of a lien or perhaps by a recapture clause, it may obtain possession of a regional railroad for purposes of reorganization, or even for Government operation. The connection of the Government with the new systems would be so close that such a provision might have to be made in order to provide for unexpected contingencies.

It remains to comment upon the suggestion which has been made in some quarters that the Government turn back the railroads to the old corporations without provision for enforced elimination of uneconomical competition, unification of management, joint use of terminal and other facilities, or similar expedients looking to economy and efficiency. It is not probable that the people of this country, having witnessed some of the advantages of the unification made necessary by the war, and having seen the solution of the railroad problem advanced many years as a result of the interruption of the management of the companies by private corporations, will now tolerate a restoration of the old conditions. Certainly they will not concede to the owners of railroads a fixed return upon their property investments if they are to continue under the old corporate control, particularly if the public is not at the same time to be given some assurance concerning rates and the wage question is not to be satisfactorily adjusted. Labor will see as much reason for obtaining a fixed return to them as to capital, and the traveling public and shippers will be unwilling to have rates left for future determination unless standardization and economies through consolidation give promise of economical and efficient service. Any plan for Government guarantee of income on property investment must come much nearer Government ownership than that which contemplates the retention of the roads by the old corporations, and especially because, as pointed out above, the Government must in return for any guarantee it makes be put in a position where, in case the new system breaks down, it can itself take possession of the roads and try some other form of operation, as, for instance, through leases to operating companies.

Basis on Which the Railroads Could Be Absorbed.

If the Government is to guarantee a return on the securities issued by the regional corporations, it must, of course, be assured that they represent the value of the roads consolidated and that under normal conditions the estimated income of the regional group will be sufficient to reimburse it. Upon such an estimate the basis of exchange of securities must be determined. Security holders will not, of course, in all cases be satisfied with the terms proposed by the Government. But the fact that their interests may be acquired under the right of eminent domain, coupled with the advantage attaching to a Government guarantee, will no doubt induce nine-tenths of them voluntarily to make the exchange proposed by the Government, especially if it is recommended by committees of security holders, which will probably be afforded the opportunity to conduct negotiations with the Government.

In the case of minority interests refusing to accept the terms offered, Congress can constitutionally provide that the regional corporation (or perhaps the Government) may acquire the physical property of the roads; or it might suffice to condemn the stock as a means of gaining complete control.

The delay and expense of condemnation proceedings are, of course, to be regretted, but it would be an incident to any plan of consolidated ownership, whether by the Government or by a regional corporation. Furthermore, any delay in determining the compensation to be paid to the individual or corporate owners would not postpone the consummation of the plan, since it would be legally possible to provide that title should vest in the Government or the consolidated corporation upon the commencement of the proceeding, and thus possession and operation by the regional corporation could be assumed at once, while provision could also be made so that the standard return or the net income should continue to be applied to the payment of interest and dividends.

The Condemnation Method.

The simplest method of acquiring the roads would be by condemning all outstanding stocks and bonds and thus securing control of the corporation, since in the case of many of the most important securities an index of value of considerable weight and easily proved is the market prices established during a number of years in public exchanges. Such prices would not, of course, be conclusive; indeed, no single circumstance would be decisive, and it would be open to an owner of securities to show that quoted prices did not represent real value, that the price would be enhanced by a larger volume of transactions, that the quotations were depressed below the fair value by the fact that the Government was condemning and that prospective and speculative value was not fairly reflected in the market. Perhaps even physical valuation might be resorted to, and certainly the income-producing power of the company under normal conditions when not affected by the war, by recent reorganization, or by some other temporary or adventitious circumstances would be pertinent. At best, the subject of fixing values is a complex one and generally, as in commercial bargaining, appraisers arrive at results by "splitting differences."

It is by no means certain that bonds could be acquired under the right of eminent domain, and it would not be wise to resort to that process if it threatened seriously to affect the stability of market values. It is not improbable, however, that the prospect of receiving new securities, guaranteed by the Government, would favorably affect the market for many bonds.

Government Guarantee and Profit-sharing.

The impairment of the credit of the railroads before the war not only depressed the market value of railroad securities, but it compelled railroads to pay excessive rates of interest. The experience of the roads with the Bureau of Railroad Administration has not tended to improve the situation. The long delay in negotiating the contract, the reluctance in some cases in fixing the standard return to recognize, in the case of roads recently in difficulties, the existence of conditions making the three years' average an insufficient test, and the delay in paying over even 90 per cent. of the guaranteed income, have contributed to affect the credit of the roads. Some of the more prosperous roads have suffered less than those less favored, but it may with truth be said that the financial credit of the roads of the country as a whole has been so affected as to make them unable permanently to discharge their public functions as efficiently as the people have a right to expect. If a change for the better is not possible within a few years the country will be driven sooner or later to Government ownership. If the advantages of private operation can be retained under such Government regulation as will insure the adequate accommodation of the public, it would be in the public interest that that result should be striven for, but it cannot be obtained unless the railroads receive from the Government a guarantee of a fair return on their property. Such a guarantee would have such a moral effect that the roads could immediately procure, at reasonable rates of interest, all needed funds for improvement, extensions, betterments, and equipment.

If security were required to insure the Government against loss on account of its guarantee, it could be secured by suitable provision in an open mortgage securing the bonds so that on foreclosure the Government could either purchase the road and operate it or lease it to an operating company. It would be possible to provide for an unlimited amount of guaranteed bonds to be sold at not less than par, all ranking pari passu and equally secured by such a mortgage.

The Government guarantee on the stock should insure a fixed return to be determined by the estimated minimum net earnings of the company in a region, all net earnings up to 6 per cent. to go to the company and anything in excess of that amount to be equally divided between the stockholders and the Government. Probably a guaranteed dividend of 4 per cent. would be practicable. It might be necessary to provide, however, that if after some fixed period changed conditions required it there should be a readjustment, effective for another fixed period, in respect of the distribution of any earnings in excess of the guaranteed 4 per cent. Such an arrangement as this would be justified by the advantage resulting to the public from the restoration of confidence in the railroads, the elimination of wasteful construction and operation, and the prospective return to the Government from the profits of the enterprise, particularly since the Government could be safeguarded in case of a failure to earn an amount equal to the guaranteed interest, by provisions under which, in case of such default, the Government could possess itself of the property.

Wages and Rates.

The plan would tend to solve both the labor and the rate problem. Rates and wages are the two factors on which more than any other the prosperity of railroads depends. Rates would be fixed by some Government agency which would be interested to see that they were fair, since the guarantee of the Government and the profit-sharing features make it a partner in the enterprise. If the demands of labor should disturb the equilibrium of the conflicting interests the Government would be confronted with the alternative of (1) making good a part of its guarantee and losing its share over the guaranteed amount of earnings, or (2) authorizing an increase in rates to meet the increased wage scale, or (3) using its power under appropriate legislation through suitable commissions to regulate and standardize wage scales. In other words, the proposed plan would tend to tie up wages and rates in such manner that they would be interdependent.

The Price of Coal.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I inquire why only 50 per cent. of normal production of anthracite coal in New York obtains just now, and why the rates of freight of an article needing no insurance are much higher than those for silks and satins, which the railroads load and unload? Further, all local retail dealers sell at a price fixed by producer in defiance of the Sherman law. I am informed that one New York banker absolutely controls the situation and fixes prices of coal. Here in Rochester we pay $10 a ton, compared with $4.25 paid in former times when the dealers were contented. Can any one believe that wages have so risen as to justify this increase in price? The profiteering is excessive and should arouse the indignation of the people. It is the poor who are suffering most. They pay about $18 a ton, buying one-eighth and one-quarter tons. J. H. S.

JAPANESE JINGOES ASSAIL AMERICA

Agitation Is Spreading to Virtually All the Leading Journals of the Empire.

BITTER TOWARD PRESIDENT

Growing Influence of United States in International Affairs Believed to be Basis of Campaign.

TOKIO, May 6, (Associated Press.)—The anti-American campaign in the Japanese press continues with renewed force. Up to the present no serious overt acts have been committed against Americans or American property. Evidence exists, however, that the newspaper agitation, which has spread to virtually all the leading journals of the empire, is inciting popular feeling against America and thus paving the way to possible open demonstrations.

Representative Japanese deplore the press campaign and have begun to criticise the Government for its failure to check the literary outbursts, on the ground that they are going so far that they are liable to engender ill-feeling.

The participants in a mass meeting held Sunday, at which some anti-American speeches were delivered, announced their intention of continuing the demonstration in front of the American Embassy. The police, however, interfered and prevented this step.

The belief is expressed here that the basis for the agitation is fear of the growing influence of the United States in international affairs, as evidenced by her position at the Peace Conference, and that it will act as a curb on what are regarded as Japan's legitimate aspirations in China and Siberia.

After declaring that renewed attempts for anti-Japanese legislation on the Pacific slope indicate that the Americans persecute Japan in everything, while wearing the mask of liberty and fairness, the Hochi Shimbun charges the Americans with having incited the Chinese to make the secret treaties public and also accuses American missionaries of fomenting the Korean insurrection.

The Yorodzu Choho says the Americans responsible for attempts at anti-Japanese legislation are nothing better than barbarians and that their actions are more despicable than those of the Germans whose barbarities they attacked.

"Hypocrite," "Despot," "Transformed Kaiser," "Man with the voice of an angel but with deeds of the devil," are some of the epithets applied by the newspapers to President Wilson.

Today's newspapers print articles accusing Americans and British in China of inciting the Chinese in the recent Chinese-Japanese agitation in Peking, based on the Japanese victory at the Peace Conference on the question of Shantung. The aim is declared to be the rooting out of Japan's superior rights in China and substituting their own influence.

At a meeting of the Kokuminto party held in Osaka a resolution was passed declaring that recognition of the Monroe Doctrine by the League of Nations should be interpreted as recognition of Japan's predominance in the Far East.

Mrs. G. De P. Triana Weds Artist.

Mrs. Gertrude De Perz Triana, the widowed daughter of the late Daniel O'Day and Mrs. O'Day of Sunset Lane, Rye, N. Y., was married to Julian F. Meredith, an artist, son of the late Sullivan Meredith of Buffalo, yesterday at noon, by Justice Albert S. Mead, at his office in Greenwich, Conn. The bridegroom is 50 years old, and this is his third marriage. The couple were accompanied by a party of relatives, and after the ceremony motored to New York.

Eufemia Giannini, Soprano, Heard.

Eufemia Giannini, soprano, a Philadelphian who has sung in opera at Turin, Italy, gave her first concert last evening at Aeolian Hall. A natural lyric voice, leaning as naturally on operatic training, was displayed in airs from Puccini's "Bohéme," "Tosca," and "Manon," Verdi's "Traviata" and Charpentier's "Louise." Her songs in English included one from Herbert's "Princess Pat."

Reading Joins Heroes' Fund.

Lord Reading, British Ambassador to the United States, who returned to England a few days ago, has accepted membership as an Honorary Patron of the French Heroes Lafayette Memorial Fund, Inc., it was announced yesterday by John Moffat, Executive Chairman of the fund. Plans are maturing for the establishment of a home and school for British war orphans at or near the ancestral home of George Washington at Sulgrave Manor, Northants, England. The work is to be conducted along the lines employed at the orphanage at the Château de Chavaniac, birthplace of Lafayette, in the Province of Auvergne, France.

HALL'S BEDDING

The Standard of Quality

Patent Clamp and Edge Spring

The hardest strain on a bed spring comes on the edge—usually the weakest part. Ordinary wear loosens the fastenings, the edge pulls away from the springs, slips off and has to be repaired.

The Hall Patent Clamp

positively prevents this slipping off or breaking down of the edge of the spring. No repairs on a Hall Patent Clamp Spring have come to our attention in eleven years.

DR. ABRAHAM JACOBI IS 89.

Noted New York Physician Celebrates His Birthday at Home.

Dr. Abraham Jacobi, Dean of New York's physicians and one of the most prominent medical men in the country, celebrated his eighty-ninth birthday yesterday in a quiet way at his home, 19 East Forty-seventh Street. A large number of friends called during the day and evening to pay their respects to the physician.

Dr. Jacobi, who was born at Hartum, Westphalia, May 6, 1830, came to this country in 1853 to engage in practice of medicine in this city. He has been on the Faculty of most of New York's medical colleges, and had been consulting physician of a dozen hospitals, and was one-time President of the American Medical Association, besides receiving many other honors. Dr. Jacobi has specialized in the diseases of children.

PRAISES VINCENT ASTOR.

Captain Commends Ensign for Bravery When Aphrodite Hit Mine.

Captain F. C. Billard, who commanded the converted steam yacht Aphrodite, formerly owned by the late Colonel Oliver H. Payne, when the vessel was hit by a floating mine on Jan. 17 as she was conveying eight members of the Interallied Waterway Commission to Germany, reported at the headquarters of the United States Coast Guard yesterday and related the particulars of the incident to Captain Godfrey L. Carden.

He praised Ensign Vincent Astor, who was the executive officer on the yacht, for his bravery in going below after the mine had exploded to investigate the damage to the Aphrodite. The Aphrodite had a crew of forty. The mine struck her forward and bumped along the side until it hit the propeller and then exploded, literally lifting the vessel out of the water after it.

While Ensign Astor went below to see the damage done the order was given to get the boats ready to abandon ship. It was found that in addition to the other damage the ship's rudder had been blown off, but with the aid of a jury rudder the Aphrodite managed to reach Kiel, and is now being repaired, after crossing the Atlantic safely at Tebo's Yacht Basin, South Brooklyn. Captain Billard said that the members of the Interallied Waterways Commission wrote to Ensign Astor commending him for his action.

GOTO TELLS JAPAN'S PLANS TO AID CHINA

Will Not Only Return Kiao-Chau but Help in Developing Shantung, He Says.

BOUND BY SOLEMN PLEDGE

His Country's Only Fear Is a Third Nation, Baron Declares at Metropolitan Club.

Baron Shimpei Goto, who resigned recently as the Japanese Minister of Foreign Affairs, discussed the policies of his Government affecting Shantung and Kiao-Chau at the meeting of the Japan Society in the Metropolitan Club last night. In beginning his speech Baron Goto said he wished to emphasize that he was "intrusted with no official or diplomatic mission," and that his opinions had no official significance because he spoke only as a private citizen.

"The Shantung question should not be viewed in the same light as the Fiume question," he said. "Japan has never demanded permanent occupation of the former German territory of Kiao-Chau. To the contrary, she has repeatedly proclaimed to the world that she would return it to China after it was unconditionally given to her at the Peace Conference. In the agreements which Japan concluded with China in May, 1915, she solemnly pledged herself to the restoration of the German territory to China, and she has always meant to adhere to that pledge.

"The so-called secret treaties entered into in 1917 between Japan and her allies, recognizing her right to inherit German rights in Shantung, were nothing but a step toward the fulfillment of that pledge which she had given China in the agreements of 1915. In the judgment of the Japanese Government it was necessary for Japan to establish an undisputed right over the German territory before she was in a position to restore it to China. Now that the Peace Conference has granted Japan's wish I have not the slightest doubt that the Government of Tokio will take steps without delay toward the restoration of Kiao-Chau to China. Not only will Japan restore Kiao-Chau to China, but she will undoubtedly enter into hearty co-operation with the Government and people of China for the development of Shantung province.

"In returning Shantung to China Japan's policy has been influenced by the fear that the Chinese Government may not be able to keep the province—that it may be virtually mortgaged to a third power, to the detriment not only of China but also of Japan. We cannot help recalling what happened to South Manchuria after that territory was returned to China by the Japanese in 1895. Scarcely had the ink been dry upon the treaty when it was, to all intents and purposes, surrendered to Russia.

"Of course, China's foreign relations have since considerably changed, and the possibility of her dismemberment has become much smaller. And yet it cannot be denied that even at present her internal conditions and her international relations are such as to cause intense anxiety to her neighbors, and especially Japan, who has fortunately managed to escape the foreign yoke which China has been unable to frustrate.

"The country is divided into various factions, each of which is eager to secure allien assistance for the purpose of entrenching itself against other factions. Who can say that the Province of Shantung will never be sacrificed to the selfish ambitions of contending factions? Who can say that any faction in China will ever be so reckless as to mortgage to a third party those rights which Japan will return to the Government at Peking?

"In returning Kiao-Chau to China, Japan will undoubtedly make it plain that she will never acquiesce in the cession of that territory to any third power or in the arbitrary granting of concessions to foreign nations in the Province of Shantung. I trust that satisfactory agreement will soon be made between China and Japan with a view to preventing such an unfortunate development."

In conclusion Baron Goto said he believed that his Government had a sincere desire to aid China and he pointed out that one of the chief needs of the nation was schools.

Dr. Inazo Nitobe of the Tokio Imperial University said he regretted that the Peace Conference had not inserted in the League of Nations Covenant the clause upon racial equality.

"German experience is a warning to all nations that believe in their racial supremacy," he continued. "I do not hesitate to tell my own countrymen that if they should err in thinking themselves superior as a race to their subject peoples, the Koreans, or to their weaker neighbors, woe will betide them at no great distance of time. The temple of universal and permanent peace can be erected only on the basis of the equality of mankind. The world cannot exist half superior and half inferior."

SEES THE END OF LYNCHING.

Rabbi Wise Speaks at Conference—Federal Legislation Asked.

Speaking last night at the closing session of the National Conference on Lynching, held in the meeting hall of the Ethical Culture Society in West Sixty-third Street, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of the Free Synagogue declared that after a tour of the country he had become convinced that lynching and mob violence, with the negro as the victim, would shortly be stamped out. Resolutions adopted at the session of the conference at the Bar Association in the afternoon called for the passage of Federal laws against lynching.

"The time has come when Americans want nothing for which they must apologize," asserted Rabbi Wise; "when we want nothing for which, as Americans, we need be afraid. The stain on our beloved land caused by the practice of lynching must be wiped out. I will not insult those of the negro race present by pleading for compassion for your race. Touching upon my own people, I have always felt that there should be no such thing as 'Jewish rights'—only human rights. But I do demand, in the name of democracy, justice for the negro race."

William Pickens, Dean of Morgan College, Baltimore, declared that the foundation of lynching lay in a general lack of regard for the negro in the "half freedom" of the race in the United States. "The man is in error, he said, who thinks he can indorse disfranchisement and segregation and "Jim Crowism" and still successfully oppose the mob.

WILL SUSPEND STUDENTS.

Syracuse Faculty Acts to Stop Sophomore and Freshman Battles.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 6.—Wholesale suspensions of members of Syracuse University sophomore and freshman classes were ordered to follow the investigation made by Chancellor James R. Day into the battles between the classes during the annual Moving-Up Day exercises.

The Senior Council, the student governing body of the university, has also begun investigations of the "pranks," which came to a head when sophomores caught a lone freshman on the university campus and saturated his face with burning liquid. Not until the blood gushed from the student's face did the sophomores let up their hazing.

The climax of the street battles between the two classes was reached when eight Sergeants and three plain-clothes officers answered a riot call to rout 500 freshmen who were pummeling the sophomore members of the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity in front of the fraternity rooms.

Sim Hall, the university men's dormitory, was also the scene of a riot. Half a dozen sophomores rooming on the top floor were besieged by a mob of a hundred freshmen, who succeeded in getting to the third floor, but were unable to make further headway, as they encountered a hot water barrage and barbed wire entanglements across the stairs. The police were finally called and the freshmen retreated.

THEODORE WESTON DEAD.

Prominent Architect and Engineer Dies in His 87th Year.

Theodore Weston, architect and engineer, died suddenly yesterday at his home, 26 West Forty-eighth Street, in his 87th year. Mr. Weston was employed on surveys and construction of the Genesee Valley Railroad and was for two years assistant engineer of the New York State canals. He was the principal assistant engineer of surveys and construction of the Brooklyn water works in 1857-60, and from 1861 to 1870 he was engineer in charge of sewerage and drainage for New York City.

From 1870 to 1882 he was superintendent, engineer, trustee, and architect of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States and was later for six years architect of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and was the architect of other important works.

Alberto Falcon.

Alberto Falcon, Vice President of W. R. Grace & Co., ship owners, exporters and importers, died yesterday at his home, 38 East Thirty-eighth Street, at the age of 58 years. Mr. Falcon was born in Lima, Peru, and came to the United States thirty-nine years ago as Secretary to the Peruvian Legation in Washington.

Dr. Frederic Russell Sturgis.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 6.—Dr. Frederic Russell Sturgis, 75 years old, of the Faculty of New York University in 1880-2 and before that for six years a lecturer there, died today at his home here. Dr. Sturgis retired from practice some years ago. He had written a number of well known books on medical subjects. From 1873 to 1893 he was visiting physician of the City Hospital in New York City.

REPORTS ROADS RAN SHORT $192,000,000

$1,031,756,000; 1915-1917 average, $569,571,000; increase, $462,185,000, or $1 per cent.

Net operating income—first quarter, 1919, $39,814,000; 1915-1917, average, $172,798,000; decrease, $132,984,000, or 77 per cent.

The increase in expenses is at the rate of about $1,850,000,000 a year, while the increase in revenues is at the rate of about $1,250,000,000 a year, an indicated loss of $600,000,000 a year. But it is believed that, with the measures now being taken to reduce operating expenses, this indicated disparity between the increase in expenses and revenues can be very considerably reduced.

Railroad officials estimate that with a $138,000,000 deficit for the first three months, the 1919 deficit will pass $200,000,000 (last year's total deficit), before July 1.

The effect of high operating costs is particularly acute in the eastern territory. The eastern lines entered the second quarter of the year with $3,617,000 less than nothing earned toward their annual standard return of $360,428,000. Their earnings compare with the test period as follows:

Operating revenue, first quarter, 1919, $497,273,006; average in test period, $353,000,000; increase, $145,288,000, or 40 per cent.

Operating expenses, first quarter, 1919, $477,811,000; average in test period, $268,141,000; increase, $209,170,000, or 77 per cent.

Net operating income, first quarter, 1919, $3,617,000 deficit; average in test period, $83,185,000; decrease, $86,802,000, or 105 per cent.

Here is Director Hines's announcement in part:

"The results for the calendar year 1918 show that at Dec. 31, 1918, the deficit incurred by the Railroad Administration for that year after deducting the rental due the railroad companies amounted to $226,000,000. For the months of January, February, and March, 1919, the aggregate deficit incurred, after deducting the rental due the railroad companies, was approximately $192,000,000. In arriving at this figure there has been charged against each of these months one-twelfth of the annual rental for the railroads.

"Generally speaking, these three months have always earned much less than three-twelfths of the return for the year, so that a substantially less charge of rental into these months would not be inappropriate. Still it seems preferable to charge a full one-twelfth of the rental into each of these months rather than to run the risk of an impression arising that there is any disposition to understate the actual results.

"To a large extent the unfavorable results for January, February, and March are due to the fact that business has fallen off and that expenses could not be correspondingly readjusted, as the loss largely arises in connection with the period of readjustment through which the country is going. Industrial enterprises generally have suffered embarrassment on account of the fact that business has been curtailed so much more rapidly than expenses could be curtailed. The railroad business is probably in its nature less elastic than any other business and shows more unfavorably the embarrassments of readjustment.

"The entire railroad organization has been and is working most earnestly to readjust costs to meet the present conditions, but the nature of the railroad business, whether under private or public control, is such that to a very large extent it is impossible to offset loss in business by a corresponding reduction in costs. On the other hand, when there shall be a substantial increase in business the revenues therefrom will be largely reflected in the net because the costs will not be correspondingly increased.

"It is believed that this improvement will be considerably emphasized by reason of the fact that maintenance has been carried forward during the favorable weather of January, February, and March on a liberal basis, despite unfavorable business, and this should be reflected in a saving in maintenance costs later in the year.

"While passenger business for the three months was only slightly less than last year, the loss in freight business was much more pronounced, as is shown by the following table:

TOTAL NET TON MILES.
(Revenue and non-revenue.)

	1919.	1918.	1917.
Jan.	30,383,169,000	27,619,567,000	32,632,616,000
Feb.	25,681,943,000	29,678,260,000	28,386,351,000
Mar.	28,952,925,000	37,706,100,000	31,674,619,000

"The figures for 1919 are strictly comparable with those for 1918, but the 1917 figures do not include all the large roads in Federal operation. In order to put all three reports on a conveniently comparable basis, the net ton miles per mile of road per day are given in the following table:

NET TON MILES PER MILE OF ROAD PER DAY.

	1919.	1918.	1917.
January	4,273	3,878	4,770
February	4,062	4,581	4,811
March	4,059	5,273	5,193

"It is impossible on the basis of these three months to predict the results for the year as a whole, although it is believed the results will be very much less unfavorable if, as seems to be generally anticipated, there shall be an important resumption of business later in the year, especially if the great crops now in prospect shall be realized.

"On the trip in the West which I have just completed I have found the most pronounced optimism on the part of business and agricultural interests generally, which gives a reasonable basis for hoping for an enlarged business that will be relatively profitable to the railroads, since handling it should not correspondingly increase their costs. But, while it is proper to mention these factors, it must be admitted that in the midst of the present period of post-war readjustment it is impossible to make any confident statement as to the results of railroad operations for the remainder of this calendar year.

"The present unfavorable results naturally lead to agitation of the question whether there ought to be an increase in rates. My own judgment is that the present conditions are too abnormal to serve as a basis for any general change in the level of rates and that it is preferable to defer action on that subject until there shall have been a fuller opportunity to get a more reliable, and possibly a more normal, measure of the conditions, meanwhile resorting to every practicable economy, studying the situation with the greatest care, and keeping the public fully informed as to developments.

"There has not been included in the months of January, February, and March the sum of approximately $6,000,000 per month for back pay on account of wage orders recently issued to put into effect recommendations of the Board of Railroad Wages and Working Conditions which were made upon proceedings pending before it during the war, such wage orders being necessary, as heretofore explained, to complete the war cycle of wages to which the Government was necessarily committed during the war. These amounts of back pay will appear in the next few months and of course will result in diminishing operating income for those months.

"One other item needs to be mentioned. Under the contract made between the Government and the American Railway Express Company in the Summer of 1918 the Government undertook to assume any operating deficit which the Express Company might incur during Government control. Such operating deficit for the first year will not be ascertainable or technically chargeable against the Railroad Administration until the end of twelve months from the effective date of the contract, i. e., July 1, 1919. The amount of this deficit, however, should be borne in mind. For the six months ending Dec. 1, 1918, such deficit was approximately $9,500,000, and for the months of January and February, 1919, (including allowance for back pay to be hereafter paid on account of those months), it is roughly estimated that such deficit will be approximately $5,040,000, making the operating deficit now in sight for the first eight months of the year which will end June 30, 1919, approximately $14,540,000.

"It can reasonably be assumed that this additional expenditure will have to be incurred by the Railroad Administration on account of the eight months in question, although it will not appear in the accounts until after June 30 next. No estimate can yet be made for the month of March.

"It is not anticipated that the conditions for April will be more favorable than the conditions for January, February, and March. In many parts of the country the effects of business readjustment were more pronounced in April than in the earlier part of the year."

RESENT AMERICAN MISSION TO IRELAND

Unionists Attack Lloyd George and Wilson for Alleged Official Recognition.

CALL VISIT INTERFERENCE

Say Americans Have No Business to Meddle—Government Permits Welcome Parade in Dublin.

LONDON, May 6.—The visit of representatives of American Irish societies to Ireland is creating great interest in Sinn Fein circles there and equal indignation in Unionist quarters in Ireland and England. Among the reports in circulation is one that passports from Paris to Ireland were granted to the mission at the request of President Wilson. There are also reports that Premier Lloyd George promised to receive the delegates of the American Irish societies and advised them to visit Belfast. This is regarded as evidence that Mr. Lloyd George does not oppose their avowed efforts toward the creation of an Irish republic.

There is considerable mystery about the whole affair, and it is not known whether Premier Lloyd George has been in communication with the visitors at all. There is one report that he promised to receive them, but canceled his engagement for the interview. A question was addressed to the Government in the House of Commons on Monday with a view to establishing whether the envoys were accredited to the American Government and also to establish their exact status. It was also asked if the Premier had intended to receive them. The question was met evasively by the Home Secretary, who promised to make inquiries, and said that this would occupy a week.

While, according to some dispatches from Ireland, the Sinn Feiners are greatly encouraged and believe the creation of an Irish republic is with in sight, the Unionist press here is angrily calling for an explanation from Premier Lloyd George and criticising President Wilson's alleged interference in British domestic affairs.

"If it is true that Mr. Wilson is behind this intrigue against the union of the United Kingdom—and after the President's behavior toward Italy anything is credible—the American Ambassador," says The Post, "ought to be told that the United Kingdom does not tolerate interference in its domestic affairs. They are our business and the business of nobody else."

The Graphic says: "If any of the States of America were again to demand the right to secede from the Union, it is certain the American people would be bitterly indignant if such a demand received any kind of official encouragement from Great Britain. We apply the same standard of judgment to American interference in our affairs."

Dunne and Ryan Honored.

DUBLIN, May 6, (Associated Press.)—Edward F. Dunne, ex-Governor of Illinois, who is in Ireland as a representative of the Irish societies in the United States, today visited Trinity College, where he was educated. Afterward he drove in a motor car, accompanied by Professor Edward De Valera, Arthur Griffiths, and Count Plunkett, the Sinn Fein leaders, to St. Patrick's College at Maynooth, where he dined with President McCafferey.

Michael J. Ryan of Philadelphia, who is on the same mission as Mr. Dunne, spent the morning near Carlow, his paternal home, going there by motor car to Maynooth. The ecclesiastical students gave the visitors an enthusiastic welcome.

In Dublin Nationalist circles the belief is expressed that the visit to London of Frank P. Walsh, another of the American delegation, is not, as stated, in connection with private business, but due to negotiations regarding Ireland now proceeding. The Sinn Feiners deny this interpretation, while Unionists assert that Mr. Walsh's visit points to a hitch in obtaining a safe conduct to Paris for the Sinn Fein leaders. Influential Unionists are making strong efforts to prevent the visit of the Sinn Feiners to the French capital.

Messrs. Ryan and Dunne arrived here last night from Belfast. They were met at the station by enormous crowds, which formed a procession and escorted the Americans through the principal streets.

Notwithstanding the military proscription of meetings and processions, there was no interference with the demonstration. Upon their arrival at their hotel, the Americans addressed the assembly from a window, dwelling upon the objects of the war and claiming the right of self-determination and a republican form of government for the Irish. They declared the Irish were as entitled to those rights as the Jugoslavs. Several Sinn Fein leaders also made addresses. The demonstration ended near midnight.

PLAN TO HAVE AIR FIELDS IN 32 CITIES

FROM ATLANTIC TO PACIFIC

Army Air Service Announces Specifications for Four Classes of Fields and Proposed Cities.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—The Government's plan for co-operating with municipalities in the establishment of airplane landing fields and creating a system of aerial highways capable of use for military, postal, and commercial purposes was announced today by the Air Service of the United States Army.

It was also made known that the Air Service, co-operating with the Post Office Department, hoped in the near future to aid in the laying out of air terminals in at least thirty-two cities and towns from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from the Canadian border to the Gulf of Mexico. These points range in size from New York City to Flatonia, Texas, and have been selected for their fitness as part of a national system of air lanes.

The new landing fields are to be of four classes, according to the importance of the city or its position with regard to military, postal, or commercial uses. No field should be proposed, the announcement states, unless it is capable of expansion, because the Air Service is looking ahead to the day when aerial navigation will challenge the older means of transportation. The announcement deals with official policy, specifications for landing fields, and classification of them. Blueprints have been prepared showing the sizes and shapes of the four kinds of proposed landing fields. Local uses of the fields are to be fixed by mutual agreement.

"The development of aviation in the United States," the Air Service announcement reads, "will be along military and commercial lines. The Air Service, although concerned primarily in the military phases of aviation development, is nevertheless vitally interested in co-operation with and assisting any other legitimate agencies which are engaged in aerial activities. Foremost among these is the Post Office Department, which now finds it necessary to establish throughout the country terminal or way stations for its aerial mail deliveries, and which is jointly associated with the Air Service in presenting this project to the attention of the municipality.

"The establishment of landing fields throughout the country through co-operation with the Government agencies and the cities concerned will certainly operate to the advantage of both the Government and the city, because in the rapid development of commercial aviation those cities which have provided the primary facilities for operation of aircraft in their vicinity will have paved the way for local benefits, resulting from the development of aerial intercity transportation, express service, mail service, emergency service and local photographic mapping of aerial protection."

The fields are to be established in accordance with articles of agreement to be entered into between the United States Government and the municipality. Neither the Air Service nor the Post Office Department will deal with any private societies or associations.

"At present," continues the announcement, "the Government can co-operate in the establishment of municipal flying fields at cities where the Post Office Department has established an aerial mail station and where the Air Service cross-country routes require intermediate stations. A study of the immediate requirements would indicate that the establishment of municipal flying fields will be confined at present to the following cities and towns:

"Boston, New York City, Richmond, Va.; Raleigh, N. C.; Columbia, S. C.; Augusta, Ga.; Macon, Ga.; Atlanta, Ga.; Kissimmee, Fla.; Mobile, Ala.; New Orleans, Baton Rouge, La.; Beaumont, Texas; Flatonia, Texas; El Paso, Texas; Texarkana, Texas; Columbus, Ohio; Tucson, Ariz.; Phoenix, Ariz.; Yuma, Ariz.; Bakersfield, Cal.; Fresno, Cal.; Buffalo, Albany, Columbus, N. M.; Kansas City, Mo.; Oklahoma City, Okla.; Uniontown, Penn.; Daytona, Fla.; Cleveland, and Chicago.

"Although the Government must confine itself at present in co-operating in the establishment of municipal landing fields at cities where the aerial mail service requires stations or where stations are required for cross-country use of the Air Service, it is not intended that such limitation should in any way restrict the establishment of other landing fields at cities and towns where local conditions would seem to warrant such action."

The general specifications provide that the location of first-class fields should be such that transportation to and from the heart of the city would not ordinarily take longer than half an hour. They should be adjacent to a good highway and near the city car lines. They should have public service utilities, such as electric light, water supply, and sewerage, should permit of expansion and should not be in a position where they are likely to be shut in by future building operations. The minimum size of any field should be such as to allow a 600-yard runway in every direction, with no interfering obstacles. The shape should be square or rectangular.

Second-class fields are those whose shape is neither square nor rectangular, and in the third-class are those which are less desirable, owing to size and location, and fail to meet the general specifications. Fourth-class flying fields are those which can be used only for landing in case of emergency.

Should the municipalities mentioned decide to co-operate with the Government, the Government will furnish an expeditionary steel hangar to be erected at the expense of the municipality. The landing field will be prepared at the expense of the municipality, which will also bear the expense necessary for personnel and the maintenance of field and equipment, exclusive of airplanes.

RIVALRY OF BRITISH TEAMS INCREASES

MAY WAIT ANOTHER WEEK

Special to The New York Times.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., May 6.—Faced once more with a conglomeration of unfavorable midatlantic winds, while the start of the American seaplanes for the jumping-off place of their trans-ocean venture grows nearer, the British fliers here are realizing more and more that they are in a real race.

The wireless announcement received here that the Handley-Page bomber is due on the Digby on Sunday adds to the sources of rivalry to be faced by the men first on the ground.

While the Sopwith men have been here five and a half weeks and the Martinsyde team three and a half without finding a favorable flying opportunity after their biplanes were ready to go, it is by no means certain that the bigger multi-engined Handley-Page may not get away within a very few days after its arrival.

In the meantime there is no definite prospect of a departure from here, and it is believed more and more by those who are most closely observing the two pilots and navigators that they probably will not attempt the "hop" before the full moon on May 14, though there is not the slightest doubt that an earlier favorable opportunity would be seized upon avidly.

Newfoundland is deeply stirred with the air racing fever, and the presence of the American advance party, coupled with the approach of the Handley-Page is keenly whetting their interest in the transatlantic venture in all its phases.

It is a curious fact that the newspapers here have devoted more attention to the initial stages of the American enterprise than they did to the arrival of the British biplanes and the first phases of their experiences at St. John's. While editorially they are full of cordial expressions of good-will for the Americans, some here attempt to argue that the fact that the Americans will attempt the trip in short hops and will not compete for The Daily Mail prize prevents any real rivalry.

The fact is that the members of the expeditions here are extremely eager, in an entire friendly spirit, to get across before the Americans, in addition to which, as devotees of land planes, they are set upon beating the seaplanes at what many consider their own job.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., May 6.—Local interest has turned to the progress of the United States Navy's flight, and St. John's papers are carrying columns from Trepassey Bay as against paragraphs regarding the project of the Britishers here. Hawker is inclined to belittle the American effort, declaring that he will wager that any fast steamer leaving New York on the same day as the "Nancies" of the navy will beat them to England.

The British airmen appear skeptical of the ability of the Liberty motors to stand the test of the long flight. Captain Charles W. F. Morgan, Raynham's navigator, signing himself "Capta'n C. W. F. Morgan, R. A. F., F. R. G. S.," announced responsibility for and attached his signature to an article printed in The St. John's Daily Star this afternoon which asserted that the American Navy's flying boat would "prove nothing practically or theoretically." The article said in part:

"At no time during their flight will they be out of sight of a ship, as the American Navy is putting a ship every fifty miles of the way, which means that the machines never will be more than twenty-five miles from a ship. This eliminates any risk, and also does away with any need of navigation. The Americans might just as well fly the English Channel fifty times, an ordinary exploit these days. The flight proves nothing practically or theoretically. The personal guidance of the pilot does not rule into the question, as the machine can land at any time alongside a ship, rest, and proceed. They are also able at any time to replenish their petrol tanks."

The article addss reference to the fact that local interest is "all for the Americans," and says:

"This seems rather unfair, and we should like to believe it untrue."

TO FLY OVER SIERRAS.

Three Army Aviators Will Start from Sacramento for Ogden, Utah.

The first attempt to fly over the Sierra Nevada Mountains will be made today by army aviators, it was announced here yesterday.

Lieutenant J. M. Fetters, in a De Haviland plane, and Lieutenants T. S. Curtis and William Beck in Curtiss planes, will start from Mathers Field, near Sacramento, Cal., for Ogden, Utah, a distance of about 700 miles.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 6.—The proposed flight of three airplanes from Sacramento to Ogden, beginning tomorrow, will be the third flight of army airplanes over the Sierra Nevada Mountains, if successful. On March 22 three airplanes left Mather Field and flew to Carson City in the first successful flight over the Sierras. Two returned to Mather Field March 23, with Governor Emmet D. Boyle of Nevada as a passenger.

AIR MISHAPS KILL THREE.

Two Army Lieutenants Fall Near Houston—Navy Gunner Drowned.

HOUSTON, Texas, May 6.—Lieutenant Henry C. Muckey of Cleveland and Lieutenant J. P. Haddock of San Diego were killed at Deer Park, near Houston, today when their airplane fell. No one saw the accident, the bodies and the wrecked plane being found by motorists.

AUGUSTA, Ga., May 6.—Gunner Richie of the Charleston Navy Yard was drowned and Pilot Whelan seriously injured in the fall of a navy hydroplane into the Savannah River near here today. Machinist Rodgers, who was also in the machine, escaped unhurt.

The hydroplane had been distributing Victory Loan literature over the city and fell into the river after striking a tree in attempting a landing.

FROM ENGLAND TO MADRID.

British Major and Crew of Five Starts Flight from Margate.

MARGATE, England, May 6.—Major Darley of the British Army, with two Lieutenants and three mechanics, started from here at 7 o'clock this morning on a flight to Madrid in a four-engined Handley-Page airplane.

The flier expected to reach the Spanish capital at 5 o'clock this afternoon.

Cleveland-Chicago Mail by Air.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Air mail service between Cleveland and Chicago will be established May 15, with trips daily except Sunday. In announcing the dates today the Post Office Department said the service would be extended from Cleveland to New York as soon as the manufacturers delivered sufficient machines.

TURK KILLS DR. GUINIS

Great Demonstration for Greece at His Funeral in Koritsa.

SALONIKI, May 5.—Dr. Guinis, who for thirty years had worked for the deliverance of Northern Epirus from the Turks and for its union with Greece was assassinated several days ago at Koritsa by a Moslem.

The funeral, which was attended by 10,000 persons, according to dispatches to the Athens News Agency, resolved itself into a manifestation in favor of Greece. Women and children carried Greek flags and buildings were decorated in the Greek colors. The commander of the French military forces in Koritsa and three Americans there attended the funeral.

The assassin, who was named Ibrahim, and who is said to have been assisted by two others, is, the dispatches declare, an agent of Italian propaganda in Northern Epirus. It is asserted that the Italians have been inciting the Moslems against the Greek Christians.

The French authorities continue their investigation of the assassination.

to lead the squadron in its journey to Nova Scotia. About 200 expert naval mechanics had worked all night on the damaged machine and at 4 o'clock yesterday morning the last wire was tightened, the motors were tested and the NC-1, which had been half a wreck twenty-six hours before, was ready to take its place as a unit of Commander Towers's squadron. Under ordinary conditions it was stated at the Air Station that from one to two weeks would have been required to repair the damage to the NC-1, but in the emergency naval mechanics did the job in just sixteen hours. The machine had even been repainted.

The NC-3, which is Commander Towers's flagship, was also damaged in Monday's fire and had to be refitted with a new set of elevating planes. In addition, a new 12-cylinder Liberty motor was also installed in this machine Monday night.

Officers Stand by Their Planes.

Lieut. Commander Albert Cushing Read, who will command the NC-4, was the first to arrive at the hangar. He inspected his machine and announced that everything was shipshape. A few minutes afterward there appeared Commander Towers, Lieut. Commander H. C. Richardson, who will pilot the flagship, and Lieut. Commander Bellinger. They were followed by Lieut. Commanders R. A. Lavender, M. A. Mitscher and R. E. Byrd; Lieutenants D. H. McCullough, L. Rhodes, E. F. Stone, J. L. Breese, L. T. Barin, and H. Sadenwater, Ensign H. C. Rodd, and Warrant Officers L. R. Moore, F. H. Howard, C. I. Kesler, and R. Christensen, who comprise the flight squadron personnel.

"Well, how's the outlook?" Bellinger asked of Commander Towers.

"Will let you know just as soon as these weather sharps send in their reports," replied the squadron commander.

Half an hour later the weather forecasters began the narration of their doleful stories and at 8:30 Commander Towers announced postponement of the start.

So rigid is the inspection to which the seaplanes are subjected that it would seem to be impossible that any defect, however small, can escape the eye of the mechanics who are all the time going over the machines, testing a wire here, looking over the motor cylinders and all other parts of the craft. It was during one of these inspections that a mechanic at 2 o'clock yesterday morning discovered that an important bearing in the engine of NC-3 was loose. To get the engine back to its proper condition required several hours' work, and it was not until 6 o'clock that the NC-3 was pronounced ready to take the air.

At 7 o'clock, when the aviators were still hoping against hope that the start for Halifax would be made, the last of the three seaplanes, which was the NC-4 was hauled out of the hangar by the little air station motor tractors.

During the afternoon the three seaplanes had hard trial tests, the tests of the NC-1 being particularly severe. Each of the machines stood up under the trial, and all were pronounced fit at sundown and ready to start at dawn this morning.

At 5 A. M. yesterday a naval messenger handed a message to Commander Towers. It was from Acting Secretary of the Navy Franklin D. Roosevelt, and read as follows:

"Washington, May 6.

"Commander John H. Towers, U. S. N., Commanding N. C. Squadron, Rockaway Beach Air Station.

"Congratulations on speed of repairs. The navy wishes you, your officers, and the men all success in the first organized effort to cross the Atlantic. I wish I were you.

"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

As the hour scheduled for the flight to start drew near relatives and a few friends of the flight personnel arrived at the Air Station. Their women relatives appeared just as disappointed as did the aviators themselves over the unfavorable turn the weather took at the last minute. The little daughter of Commander Richardson told her disappointed father that she was certain he would get away bright and early this morning.

A number of officers from the Atlantic Fleet and the Navy Yard also got up early and journeyed to the air station in the hope of witnessing the historic getaway of Towers's squadron.

It was announced that Commander Towers expects his squadron to maintain an average speed of about sixty-five nautical miles an hour, which is about seventy-five ordinary land miles.

The following official description of the NC seaplanes was given out yesterday by a representative of the Navy Department who was at the air station as the personal representative of Acting Secretary Roosevelt.

Facts About the Seaplanes.

Upper wing from tip to tip, 114 feet.
Aileron projections beyond wing tips, 6 feet on either side.
Lower wing span, 94 feet.
Width of wings, 12 feet.
Distance between wings, 14 feet at centre and 12 feet at outer tips of lower wing.
Over-all length from front end to the rear end, 68 feet 3½ inches.
Wing area, 2,380 square feet.
Weight of flying boat, (empty,) including wireless installation and all navigating instruments, 15,100 pounds.
Weight full load flying condition, 28,300 pounds.
Percentage of useful load to total load, that is, load not a portion of structure or equipment, 47 per cent.
Weight carried per square foot of wing surface, 12 pounds.
Estimated speed at full load, 79 nautical miles per hour.
Estimated speed at light load, 84 nautical miles per hour.
Horsepower of four Liberty engines, 1,600 horsepower.
Number of gasoline tanks, nine in hull, one in upper wing above boat hull.
Capacity of gasoline tanks, 200 gallons for each hull tank and 90 gallons for gravity feed tank in upper wing.
Weight of gasoline system, 6 pounds per gallon of gasoline.
Weight of engines, 825 pounds each.
Weight of boat hull, (empty,) 2,650 pounds.
Area of ailerons, 265 square feet.
Area of stabilizers, 267.6 square feet.
Area of elevators, 240.1 square feet.
Area of rudders, 60 square feet.
Displacement of wing tip pontoons, 1,800 pounds each.
Weight of wing tip pontoons, 95 pounds each.
Gasoline pumps are wind driven by small wooden propellers and are in duplicate; an auxiliary hand-operated gasoline pump is provided.
Flying control is of the dual control Deperdussin system with side-by-side seating.
Pilots are in hull just forward of gasoline tanks.
Complete sets of instruments provided for pilots, including one compass for each pilot.
Navigating station is in front end of boat hull. Navigator is provided with chart board, charts, and ordinary navigating instruments, including compass and sextant.
Complete wireless installation, including telegraph and telephone and wireless direction indicator, is provided. System should give a radius of approximately 300 miles while in the air and of 100 to 150 miles while on the water.
Electric current is furnished by electric generator operated by a wind-driven propellor. Current is delivered to storage batteries. In addition to operating wireless set, storage batteries operate complete lighting system for interior of boat and for wing tip and tail lights as well as lights for night landing.
Wireless operator and engineer are located in main after-compartment just aft of gasoline tanks. Each is provided with complete instrument board. Each of these operators has a cylindrical upholstered stool with back rest weighing 5 pounds complete, in the interior of which can be stored the small hand tools required for emergency work.
Cruising speed of boats, about 72 miles per hour.
Gasoline consumption at cruising speed, about 650 pounds average per hour.
Total gasoline carried, about 11,400 pounds.
Cruising radius without wind, about 1,476 nautical miles.
Lubricating oil capacity, about 900 pounds.
Crew and provisions, about 1,000 pounds.
Crew, five men—two pilots, one navigator, one wireless operator, and one engineer.
Main structure is of Western spruce.
Metal wing fittings and structural fittings in general are of chrome vanadium steel of an ultimate strength of 150,000 pounds per square inch.
All flying and landing and control wires are of standard woven airplane cord wire.
Wing covering is linen treated with the ordinary airplane fabric dopes.
Gasoline tanks are of aluminium and gasoline piping is partly of aluminium and partly of copper.
Streamlining forms about wing struts are of Micarta. Streamlining of flying and landing wires is of rubber covered with rubberized fabric.
Main keels of boat hulls are of oak or of rock elm. Hull structure is in general of spruce. Planking is of spruce or of cedar. Turtle-back covering is of cedar or of cottonwood birch three-ply veneer.
Cowling around engine nacelles is aluminium.
Four liquid fire extinguishers are carried in each boat hull.
Access to any portion of the boat hull by means of wing passages or to any portion of the power plant by means of hatches in the boat hull may be had either while on the water or while in the air.
All control surfaces, such as ailerons, rudders, and elevators, are balanced by a portion of the area forward of the pivoting points in order to relieve the work of the pilots.

The bodies of Ensign Hugh J. Adams of Pittsburgh and Chief Machinists' Mate Harold B. Corey of Binghamton, who were killed Monday afternoon when an HS-1 type of seaplane in which they were flying fell into an air pocket and crashed into the hydrogen tower at the Air Station, instantly killing both men, were removed yesterday to the Naval Hospital on Flushing Avenue, Brooklyn. The bodies will be taken to Pittsburgh and Binghamton for burial. The report of the board that investigated the accident was not made public. It will be given out in Washington, it was said by the Navy Department.

DESTROYERS AGROUND IN GALE

Flight Patrol Ships at Trepassey Floated Without Damage.

TREPASSEY, N. F., May 6.—Conditions at the Newfoundland base of the United States Navy's transatlantic flight late this afternoon had returned to normal when three warships dragged their anchors and grounded during a heavy gale early today were again anchored in deep water. After divers had inspected the vessels officers declared any injuries the guardships may have received were minor and would not prevent them being on their stations on May 10. The fuel ship Hisko was the first stranded vessel to be floated. This morning other destroyers pulled the destroyer Foote off shore, and this afternoon the mother ship Prairie towed the destroyer Maddox to safety.

To ten vessels now anchored here will be added tonight six more destroyers detailed for guard duty. These are the Ward, Palmer, Walker, Thatcher, Crosby, and Laub. No craft left today, but several are scheduled to depart tomorrow.

TO MAKE ECONOMIC SURVEY OF PANAMA

Dr. C. J. Owens Sails with Staff Today to Make Plans for Benefit of Republic.

SEE A BOOM DUE TO CANAL

Pan American College of Commerce Projected to Bind North and South America Closer.

Dr. Clarence J. Owens, Director General of the Southern Commercial Congress, will sail from New York today with a staff of six men on the United Fruit steamer Santa Marta for Colon to conduct an economic survey of Panama and formulate a plan for the economic reconstruction of the republic.

At the Hotel Pennsylvania yesterday Dr. Owens outlined the objects of his mission, which was created under a law passed by the Congress of Panama. He was appointed by President Porras largely because of the survey conducted under his direction in the United States and in eighteen countries of Europe, which resulted in the Federal Farm Loan act.

Acting on the authority vested in him Dr. Owens has organized an Advisory Council composed of W. P. G. Harding, Governor of the Federal Reserve Board; George W. Norris, Commissioner, Federal Farm Loan Board; Duncan U. Fletcher, Senator from Florida and a member of the International High Commission, and John Barrett, Director General of the Pan American Union.

Dr. Owens said that he and his staff intended to spend two or thre months in Panama. The survey will include the manufactures, farms, banks, and finances in preparation for the development that, it is felt, is bound to come with the end of the war and when the Panama Canal will be again in great use for commercial purposes. Dr. Owens believes that the canal will bring to Panama a greater era of prosperity than ever before.

Dr. Owens said that he would propose the establishment of a Pan American College of Commerce in Panama, which would be to the trade and commerce of Latin America and the United States what Plattsburg was to the army—a preparation for the larger life immediately ahead. Men interested in this trade, he said, would be expected to attend the college, where they would receive instruction in English and Spanish and in the trade customs and needs of the peoples of the two continents.

Dr. Owens thought that an attendance of 800 men from North America and an equal number from South America would help to bind together the peoples of the two nations and prove of mutual advantage in many practical ways. The idea of the college, he said, had received the approval of President Porras and several leading men of Panama.

In his letter to Dr. Owens advising him of his appointment to the mission, President Porras said he knew of no reason why Panama should not, in the near future, be the centre of commerce between North and South America as a result of the work of the mission. Dr. Owens said he shared President Porras's enthusiasm about the future of the Panama Canal.

In 1913 Dr. Owens headed a staff of 118 men in an exhaustive survey of the countries of Europe and made his recommendations to President Wilson. The Federal Farm Loan bill was introduced in Congress soon after the report of the mission was made to the President. Dr. Owens also arranged for the preventive medical work of the Rockefeller Foundation in Central America. In 1912 he directed a commercial expedition in Central America and reported the results to the Government.

On the active staff accompanying Dr. Owens to Panama are Boris A. S. Aranow, Economist and Statistician of the Federal Farm Loan Board; Colonel T. R. Preston, Financial Expert and President of the Hamilton National Bank of Chattanooga; Robert M. Estes, Statistical Expert, Department of Commerce; Emilio M. Amores, translator and interpreter of the staff of the Pan American Union, and Charles H. Baker, secretary to the commission, former private secretary to the Governor of the Canal Zone.

NIXON TO ACT FIRST ON TRANSFER PLEA

New Commissioner's Ruling on B. R. T. Will Be Precedent for Manhattan.

ESTIMATE BOARD IN CASE

Is Expected to Protest Only If a Large Reduction in Transfers Throws Burden on Citizens.

One of the important matters now pending before the Public Service Commission, and which the new commissioner, Lewis Nixon, will early be called upon to decide, is the application of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company for the abrogation of the old commission's order extending beyond the legal requirements the giving of transfers. Under the law, the various companies are compelled to transfer passengers to other cars of the same company, but the present order spreads the system to many additional points, and while the surface railroads in Brooklyn operated as subsidiaries of the B. R. T. Company, different companies control them.

Last Fall the B. R. T. company filed with the commission new tariffs which divided the surface lines into two zones with a 5-cent fare for each. They also provided for a modification of the transfer system so that transfers would be of service only within the zone in which they were issued. Twelve routes were affected by the proposed plan. Several months later hearings on the matter began, and they have continued since that time, without result. Mr. Nixon has indicated that he intends to dispose of all pending matters as speedily as possible, so that he will have thereafter some "new ground" to work in.

If he so decides, he may relieve the B. R. T. Company of giving transfers at a great many points, perhaps as many as one hundred. This would mean, it was said yesterday, a great many more fares for the company, and increased expenditures of many passengers, while it might establish a precedent for action on an application by the New York Railways Company based on somewhat similar grounds.

It was said yesterday that there was no doubt but that Commissioner Nixon had the right to abolish all of the transfers not required by law or by franchise obligations. It was suggested at the same time that any help given to the company, which would increase the burdens of citizens, would bring quick and sharp protests from the Board of Estimate.

It is expected that the hearings on the application of the company will be resumed next week and that a decision on the matter will follow without much delay.

Commissioner Nixon spent only a short time at his office yesterday, but he cleaned up all of the day's business before leaving to view the parade. It was learned that in all probability he would select his three deputies some day this week. The longer he delays the greater grows the number of eager applicants.

One of the deputies, it was said, would either be chosen from the Bronx, or be assigned especially to that territory, while another would represent Queens, and a third man would look after Brooklyn and Richmond. Mr. Nixon himself will take charge of the interests of Manhattan.

BARNES TWIRLS EFFECTIVELY AGAINST UNHAPPY BRAVES AND GIANTS WIN EASILY

An Irish gentleman once told us how, during a brief experience as a Texas cow boy, he incurred the ridicule of his companions when, while undressing at the swimming hole, one of the rough riders sang out "boys just look at the tenderfoot—he wears socks," whereupon he discarded hosiery for the time being.

To-day, in certain sections of North Carolina there still appears to be a prejudice against socks, but now the "tenderfoot" is distinguished by the sort of socks he wears. Cotton or wool socks are not considered luxuries, however costly, but the line is drawn on silk—at least silk costing over $1 per pair.

So let the "Silk Stocking Gentry" beware! Ye spendthrifts who wear $1.50 silk hose must drop a nickel in the slot for Uncle Sam.

The tax is 10% on the excess of the legal limit fixed by Congress on luxuries.

BRAVES ARE EASY PREY FOR GIANTS

Drop Ninth Straight for Season in Debut at Polo Grounds as McGraw's Men Win, 6 to 4.

18,000 FANS SEE CONTEST

Rudolph Is Driven from Box Under Avalanche of Hits in Fourth—Doyle Hits Home Run.

It's getting along close to the straw-hat season, and the Boston Braves haven't won a ball game yet. They dropped a game to the Giants at the Polo Grounds yesterday by a score of 6 to 4, their ninth straight defeat of the young season. Many New York friends and admirers of George W. Grant, the new owner of the Braves, gathered in Harlem to give the Braves a warm reception.

Just before the game all the players gathered around the home plate, and Mr. Grant, in fawn spats and a brown derby, walked over from his box and received a mound of flowers six feet tall. Mr. Grant said he was much obliged, but he would rather have his club win a ball game once in a while than receive all the flowers on Fifth Avenue.

Jess Barnes delivered a nice pitching job yesterday, and held the Braves to seven hits. He was effective when he needed to be, and McGraw's men were never in very much danger. The Braves include many faces familiar to New Yorkers. Al Demaree, the Memphis Stogie, once with the Giants; Ray Keating, who disappointed many Yankee admirers in this town; Charley Herzog, and Art Wilson, both former residents of Harlem. Walter Holke, another ex-Giant, is at first base. All in all, the Braves have been collected from far and wide and represent many different parts of the baseball universe.

A crowd of 18,000 seemed highly pleased at the Giants' victory. On account of the holiday for the parade, the ball game was a magnet for a whole lot more people than usually go to the Polo Grounds on Tuesdays.

Giants Land on Rudolph.

Dick Rudolph of the Bronx started the pitching task for the Braves, but he was taken out after being roundly jarred for a single, double, and triple in the fourth inning.

George Northrop took a trial at the pitching job. Northrop attracted the interest of the populace chiefly because of his fancy wind-up. Before delivering the ball, Northrop waved his right arm around his head in sweeping, serpentine curves. The object of this wild waving of arms seemed to be to puzzle the Giants' batsmen, but the only result it had was to make Northrop tired. He gave way to Al Demaree in the seventh.

Larry Doyle hasn't seen Demaree in a long time, and he was so glad to see him in a Boston uniform that he greeted him with a home-run smash into the right-field grand stand. Up to yesterday Demaree thought that he had a friend in Larry Doyle.

Rabbit Maranville, just out of the navy, opened the game with a slow infield hit, and stole second. Herzog sacrificed him to third, and when Lew McCarty let one of Barnes's benders get away from him, the Rabbit scored. The Giants got the run back in their half of the inning. Burns was safe when Herzog made a low throw to first, Burns going all the way to second. Young got a two-bagger in short right, and Burns scored.

The Giants went into the lead in the third. Young singled to right, and went to third on Chase's single to centre. Doyle singled to right and scored Young, Chase being tagged out at the plate trying to score on the same hit. It seemed like a hopeless task for Chase to reach the platter in time, for Powell made a fine throw to Wilson.

Zim Leads Attack.

With two gone in the fourth, the Braves tied the score. Riggert singled to left and stole second, scoring on Holke's two-base bang to left. The fourth saw the finish of Dick Rudolph. Zimmerman opened up the attack with a two-bagger to left. After Fletcher flied to Kelly, McCarty hammered a three-bagger to the centre-field fence, scoring Zimmerman. McCarty scored on a sacrifice fly by Barnes.

The Braves kept picking away, and got another run in the sixth, when Herzog doubled, and, after Powell and Smith went out, scored on Riggert's single to centre. Another Brave tally came in the seventh. With one gone, Kelly beat out an infield tap and stole second. After Scott, who batted for Northrop, fanned, Maranville peppered a tremendous drive to centre field. He sent Kelly home, and it looked as if the Rabbit was on his way to a home run. Benny Kauff made a quick recovery of the ball, relayed it to Fletcher, who got it to McCarty just in time to tag Maranville as he was sliding in. It was a tough disappointment for Maranville.

The Giants made their total tallies five in the fifth inning, when, with one gone, Doyle singled, and went to second on Kauff's hit. Doyle and Kauff negotiated a double steal, and Larry scored from third as Zimmerman was being thrown out at first by Maranville. In the seventh, with Demaree pitching for Boston, Doyle crashed a homer into the stand, and what little hope the Braves were still cherishing vanished.

YANKS LET VICTORY SLIP.

Miss Opportunities and Lose to Mackmen by 3 to 2.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 6.—The Yankees made their début at Shibe Park this afternoon and dropped a ten-inning game to the minions of Mack, after passing up numerous opportunities to make it an easy victory. Inning after inning showed the New Yorkers in a position to make runs but one was the limit in any frame, thirteen of the visitors being left on the bases. The final score was 3 to 2.

When a team collects only two runs on ten hits and eight passes, and it is necessary to insert an error into the affair to put the second run over, something is wrong with the scoring machinery. That was the story of the Yankees this afternoon. Even before the home team had made its first hit the Huggins herd had landed on Scott Perry for eight hits and Perry had walked seven men. From this opportunity one lonely run developed, and it would have been the only marker for the Yankees if Joey Dugan had not contributed a weird toss to George Burns in the eighth.

With the score tied in the eighth, after Dugan's misplay, the New York team fell asleep while opportunity pounded on the door. Lamar's double, putting runners on second and third with one out, was the signal for the recall of Seibold, who had succeeded Scott Perry. Huggins took out Halas, who was playing his first major league game, to let Vick hit against Southpaw Walter Kinney. Vick fouled out and put the issue up to Peck. A pass to Peck filled the bases, and Pipp went out on strikes.

The Yanks played a poor fielding game, but none of their four misplays had any effect on the scoring. The Mackmen managed to get their hits where they did the most good, three of the four safeties of the home team figuring in the run getting. Running catches by Halas and Pratt were the fielding features.

New York's first run arrived in the third inning. Peck walked, took second on Pipp's sacrifice, third on Baker's infield out, and scored on Pratt's single to centre.

Thormahlen held the home team hitless for six innings, but in the seventh two hits and some wildness netted two runs. With a sing1ed, and advanced on Shannon's sacrifice. Dugan, Walker, and McAvoy walked to first, Witt being forced home with the tying run. After Kopp had forced Dugan at the plate with a grounder to Peck, Thomas singled to centre, and Dykes, pinch running for Walker, crossed the plate.

Seibold began pitching in the eighth. Lewis singled to centre, went to second on Bodie's sacrifice, and scored on Dugan's poor throw to get Ruel at first. After Lamar had doubled to left, Kinney came on, and tamed the Yanks for the remainder of the game.

The Mackmen won in the tenth. With two men gone, Burns was hit, and he stole second. Shawkey walked Witt, and then came Shannon's single to right, scoring Burns.

WHITE SOX BEAT TIGERS.

In Pitchers' Duel Williams Has a Shade Over Boland.

CHICAGO, May 6.—Chicago won a pitchers' battle from Detroit, 3 to 1, today in the presence of several thousand soldiers and sailors, including several ambulance loads of wounded. Williams held the Tigers to four hits. Boland was hit harder, but the White Sox won on a fumble by Heilman, Jackson's three-bagger, and Felsch's sacrifice fly.

DODGERS OVERCOME BIG LEAD AND WIN

Rally Against Oeschger and Prendergast and Bat Out 11 to 9 Victory Over Phillies.

For a time yesterday at Ebbets Field the spirit of generosity permeated the autumnlike air when Jack Coomba's Prancing Phillies clashed with the Robins in the first game of their series. President Charles H. Ebbets of the Brooklyn Club, remembering Coomba's services as a pitcher with the Robins, presented the former twirler with a silver tea set and a rifle just before the start of the game. The gift was made on behalf of the players and owners of the Brooklyn Club.

Subsequently the Robins sought to contribute in generous spirit to their former teammate, and started giving Coombs the game, but the Phillies declined to accept. The Robins' spirit of generosity melted as suddenly as it had started, and the Superbas cracked out a victory by 11 to 9, to the delight of 10,000 fans.

Burleigh Grimes and Joe Oeschger started what was expected to develop into a long struggle. The Robins' defense was weak in the first inning. Lee Magee and Ivan Olson just simply couldn't get their hands on the balls pounded at them by Philadelphia batters.

Errors followed each other with quick succession, fumbles, bad throwing, and juggling of the ball creating a condition of play that was the wierdest seen on the Flatbush frontier in many moons. Before Magee and Olson returned to earth six runs were chalked up for the Phillies, as a result of a brace of errors by Magee, one by Olson, four hits, and a pass from Burleigh Grimes.

Then in the second Williams hit a home run over the right-field fence, giving Coombs's athletes a margin of 7 to 0.

Thereafter the conditions underwent a lightning change. Runs for the Phillies were scarce up to the eighth, when they managed to add another marker to their total on a pass to Cady, a single by Cactus Cravath, pinch hitting for Mike Prendergast, and another error by Magee.

In the third the Robins started a batting carnage on Oeschger which sent that young man to the showers. Five hits resounded over the ballyard, including a triple by Malone and a double by Grimes. This free-for-all ended in six runs for the Robins, and in the fourth Mike Prendergast was summoned to do hurling duty. Mike was not effective. Up to the seventh inning he was pounded for seven hits and five runs. In the eighth he was ordered to the bench to give Cravath a chance to crack out a timely single. In the Robins' half of the eighth Faircloth took the mound, and, though touched for two hits, was not scored on.

Sailors from a United States receiving ship stationed at Bay Ridge will witness this afternoon's game at Ebbets Field between the Robins and the Phillies as guests of the Brooklyn Club. Two thousand bluejackets have been invited to attend the game, and will arrive in a body, under command of Lieutenant Siefke and accompanied by a band of forty pieces.

CORNELL YIELDS TO W. VA.

Mountaineers Have Little Difficulty in Downing Ithacans.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., May 6.—West Virginia defeated Cornell here this afternoon by a score of 4 to 2, outhitting the Ithacans and playing much faster and cleaner ball. Seven errors were charged up against Cornell and some of them proved costly.

Lemsley pitched effectively for the visitors and had good support, except in the sixth. Gordon, who started on the mound for Cornell, was hit hard, but Dodson, his successor, proved much more effective.

A home run drive to deep centre by Dawson in the third inning was one of the features of the game, and Turkovitch's hitting was also a factor. For Cornell Ensworth's two-base hit in the eighth inning, scoring Quinlan, was the best bit of stick work.

PERSHING OPENS BIG ARMY SHOOT

A. E. F. Marksmen Begin Tournament at Le Mans—Texas Private Turns In Best Score.

MANY SOLDIERS TRY SKILL

Commander Tells Officers and Men Efficiency with Arms Is Asset in War and Peace.

LEMANS, May 6, (Associated Press.)—In the presence of General John J. Pershing, Commander in Chief of the American Expeditionary Forces, and other high officers of the army, the A. E. F. rifle, pistol, and musketry competition, considered the greatest marksmanship tournament in the history of the United States Army, was opened on the D'Avours Range, near Lemans, today.

After the commanding General, accompanied by Brig. Gen. William E. Welsh, officer in charge of the meet, had inspected the range, the rifle competitors were assembled at the first firing point, where General Pershing addressed them briefly. He said it was an honor to be selected to compete in a contest of this kind, and spoke of the importance of accurate shooting and the distinction which skill with the rifle bestows upon its possessor. He urged the officers and men to carry with them, whether their future lay with the regular army, the National Guard, or civilian life, the reminder that painstaking training and proficiency in the use of firearms is a great national, as well as a great personal, asset.

The scores today were preliminary—slow fire at 300 yards, 500 yards, and 600 yards, and rapid fire at 200, 500, and 600 yards. Qualification scores will probably begin tomorrow afternoon.

Private Karl Kennedy, a former Texas National Guardsman, from the 141st Infantry, stood at the top of the list with a score of 159 out of a possible 170. Next Captain Augustus B. Hale, 6th Machine Gun Battalion, a noted army shot, by two points.

Lieutenant Edgar H. Gerber, Headquarters First R. D., 137; Sergeant Joseph W. Togue, 11th Marines, 136; Captain W. W. Walker, 6th Marines; Sergeant Guy B. Smith, 6th Marines; Captain Walter A. Meyer, Army Occupation Centre, and Sergeant Dave Grauber, 306th Engineers, 135 each.

Lieutenant Highland Michell, 142d Infantry; Sergeant Robert J. Smouka, 58th Infantry; Sergeant Walter S. Dohren, 144th Infantry; Corporal J. U. Patterson, 6th Marines; Sergeant Theodore E. Crowley, 5th Marines; Private Frank S. Spachote, 351st Infantry, and Sergeant V. R. Nalnes, 13th Marines, 134 each.

Lieutenant James C. Littell, 47th Infantry; Corporal Joseph Hooklem, 1st Ammunition Train; Private Thomas Elmer, 9th Infantry; Private W. Zimmerman, 60th Infantry; Sergeant John R. Hall, 60th Infantry; Private J. J. McCarthy, 26th Infantry; Captain H. C. Fuller, Marine Corps, and Sergeant J. F. Walters, 13th Marines, 133 each.

NABLE MEETS WITH DEFEAT.

Amateur Champion Loses to De Vito in Boxing Tourney.

A. J. De Vito, a young boxer of the New West Side A. C., furnished a sensation last night at the preliminaries of the New York State championship amateur boxing tournament at the City A. C. when he gained the judges' decision over Sam Nable, Clark House A. A., metropolitan champion at the weight. De Vito, entered for the 108-pound class, came in too heavy for this division and was compelled to compete in the next higher class.

The New West Side A. C. youngster furnished a brand of boxing that completely surprised his titleholding opponent. With the exception of the first round, Nable was unable to make any impression on De Vito. The latter, outpointed early in the opening session, finished strong, and rocked the champion with a stiff right to the jaw near the bell in the second and third rounus De Vito continued his good work, and easily carried the judges' award at the expiration of the three-round contest. The verdict was popularly received.

The summaries:

115-Pound Class.—A. J. De Vito, New West Side A. C., defeated Sam Nable, Clark House A. A., three rounds, judges' decision.

125-Pound Class.—P. Pizzo, Morse Dry Dock, defeated J. Epstein, Mercury A. C., four rounds, referee's decision, (judges disagreed); J. Frazier, Pastime A. C., defeated M. Purcell, St. John's Club, two rounds, referee's decision; M. Reisler, Pastime A. C., defeated J. Geller, Pastime A. C., three rounds, judges' decision; M. Zuckerman, Marshall Gymnasium A. A., defeated G. Eastman, Morse Dry Dock, three rounds, judges' decision.

Second Trials—Sam Sieger, unattached, defeated Pizzo, one round, referee's decision.

145-Pound Class.—Louis Aldrin, Norwegian Turn and A. C., defeated J. Frank, Educational Alliance, three rounds, judges' decision; M. Barits, Union Settlement A. C., defeated M. Seligman, Pastime A. C., three rounds, judges' decision.

Heavyweight Class.—J. J. Tomashek, New West Side A. C., defeated A. Silverstein, Union Settlement A. C., three rounds, judges' decision.

N.Y.A.C. TO GET MURCHISON.

Western Sprinter May Wear Mercury Foot Before Summer Ends.

While he has not yet definitely announced his intention of taking up a permanent residence in this city, it is expected that the great Western sprinter, Loren Murchison, will soon register with the Metropolitan A. A. U. and affiliate with the New York A. C. Murchison's registration in St. Louis expires May 15.

Under the rules of the A. A. U., Murchison must be a resident of this section for three months after he declares his intention of assuming club affiliations before he can represent a club in open competition. This would give the St. Louis flash an opportunity to compete in the closing track and field meets of the outdoor season as a member of the New York A. C.

TO REVIVE CATHOLIC A. L.

Athletic Organization Will Be Put on a Pre-War Basis.

Plans for a restoration of activities to a pre-war basis and an active outdoor season will be adopted Friday night at a reorganization meeting of the Catholic Athletic League to be held at the Paulist A. C.

Ten clubs held membership in the league before the war, and it is expected there will be an increase in this number before the outdoor season ends. Already officials of the Knights of St. Antony, Paulist A. C., Loughlin Lyceum, Ozanam A. A., and St. Anselm's A. C. have declared their intention of resuming affiliation with the league.

It is planned to conduct a handicap track and field meet for C. A. L. athletes late in June and a championship meet in September. Dates for these two meets will probably be adopted Friday night.

ORGANIZE BANKING HOUSE.

Maurice Silvester Named President of French-American Corporation.

The organization meeting of the French-American Banking Corporation, a recently incorporated combination of French and American banks to foster trade between this country and France, was held yesterday. Officers were elected as follows: Maurice Silvester, President; Robert P. Kavanagh, Vice President and Treasurer; John E. Rovensky, Vice President; F. Abbot Goodhue, Vice President; Thomas E. Green, Secretary. The banks participating in the combination are the Comptoir National des Compte de Paris, the National Bank of Commerce of New York, and the First National Bank of Boston.

Mr. Silvester has represented the Comptoir National des Compte de Paris here for many years. Mr. Kavanagh was for a period of years connected with the New York State Banking Department, and latterly has been Vice President of the National Bank of Commerce of New York, and Mr. Goodhue is Vice President of the First National Bank of Boston. Mr. Green has been connected with Blair & Co.

The Directors representing the American interests in the corporation are James S. Alexander, President of the National Bank of Commerce of New York; Daniel G. Wing, President of the First National Bank of Boston; John E. Rovensky, Vice President of the National Bank of Commerce; F. Abbot Goodhue, Vice President of the First National Bank of Boston; Harry B. Thayer, President of the Western Electric Company, and Owen D. Young, Vice President of the General Electric Company.

The French interests in the corporation are represented by the following Directors: Paul Boyer, President of the Comptoir National des Compte de Paris; Maurice Silvester, Paul Fuller, Jr., of New York, a member of the firm of Coudert Brothers; Edgar Llewellyn, manager of the Comptoir National des Compte de Paris, and Stanislas Simon, managing Director of the Banque de Indo-Chine, Paris, and Director of the Comptoir National des Compte de Paris.

Postal Receipts Are Increasing.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—From Jan. 1 to April 30, receipts of the fifty largest Post Offices, yielding about half of the postal revenue, showed an increase of more than 9 per cent. as compared with the corresponding period last year. Receipts for April showed an increase of nearly 14 per cent. Postmaster General Burleson said today that this record verified the opinion he expressed two months ago that the country was on "the threshold of a period of pronounced industrial prosperity."

BARNES PLANS CURB ON WHEAT DEALERS

Tells the Chicago Board of Trade That He Has Authority to Stop Futures Trading.

THREATENS 1917 CONTROL

Says Flour Prices Must Reflect the Real Situation—Intends to Issue a Weekly Report.

CHICAGO, May 6.—Julius H. Barnes, National Grain Administrator, said in an address today, to members of the Chicago Board of Trade, that the act establishing the Food Administration, gave authority to control trading in foodstuffs on Exchanges to the extent of prohibiting future trading altogether. He said the act was still in effect, and that his duty was imperative if demonstrated abuse should arise.

A conference will be called on May 13 at New York between representatives of millers, bakers and grain traders, and others at which certain trade agreements will be enteerd into, Mr. Barnes announced. He added that if the prices of flour did not sharply reflect the real situation in regard to supplies, the United States must shortly return to the 1917 food regulations which allowed only thirty days' supply to be held on hand. He did not want to do this, however, he said.

Mr. Barnes questioned frankly whether a fluctuation in corn prices, such as took place in Chicago yesterday—a rapid break of 10 or 12 cents—was not a clear indication of speculation on so large a scale that it was overbalancing legitimate functions.

There was a touch of the dramatic in the appearance of Mr. Barnes in the quotations room, off the trading floor, for yesterday was not the first time that an utterance of Mr. Barnes has upset the calculations of traders.

The crowd was bullish yesterday, and building thereon with due consideration to muddy roads, rain, and other factors making for higher prices. Their buying had run the price to a new high record for the crop when out of the clear sky there came from Minneapolis Mr. Barnes's statement that wheat was to be imported in moderate quantities from Canada.

Prices dropped 10 to 12 cents, and there were among Mr. Barnes's listeners today many who lost money in the slump. They regarded him as one who had thrown a monkey wrench into the machinery, although he had given ample warning a week or so before that he would take just such action if speculation in flour was not curbed.

Plans to Co-operate with Dealers.

He warned them that with "half the world in chaos," as he phrased it, business must be tempered with sentiment. "I know that the Food Administrator relies on the officers of this Exchange and others to protect this situation in the public interest," he said, "and I am sure he will not look in vain."

"It has been in my mind for some time, and at a conference in New York a week from today, which I have arranged with advisory committees from the grain trade, from the milling trade, from the flour jobbers and bakers of this country, among others, I shall discuss the tabulation of a weekly report of authentic and exact information to be made public. I do not see why, for instance, the baking trade and the jobbing trade of this country should be excited by entirely erroneous statements as to the growing scarcity of wheat and flour when it is not the condition.

"As for the coming year," he continued, "I have a great desire that the duties of the Wheat Director may be discharged, not by compulsion or the use of the authority vested in the law solely, but by co-operative agreements with the various trades affected. I hope to work out voluntary contractural relations between the Grain Corporation, the milling trade, the grain trade, the flour jobbers, and the bakers such as will protect fully the proper interests of both producer and consumer and afford a fair field for legitimate initiative and energy, and an outlet for legitimate ambition."

The speaker said he wished to make it clear that the Wheat Director has no authority in law to control maximum prices of wheat, but he must make effective absolutely the guaranteed producer price.

When Mr. Barnes concluded there was applause and then a rush back to the trading pits. The price was nervous for a few minutes, at first dropping half a cent or so, and then, after a little hesitation, the price recovered and attained the best of the day. The general opinion seemed that the bearish references had been fully discounted by yesterday's decline.

To All Income Tax Payers

THE 4¾% Victory Notes are exempt from all State and local taxes, except estate and inheritance taxes, and from normal Federal income taxes.

The value of the exemption from the normal Federal income tax is indicated by the fact that a corporation bond would have to yield about 5.16% to pay holders who are liable to the normal tax as high a return as the 4¾% Victory Notes.

The 3¾% Victory Notes, into which the 4¾% notes may, at the option of the holder, be converted, are exempt from all Federal, State and local taxes, except estate and inheritance taxes.

The value of this exemption to any holder is measured by the rate of taxation which he pays. In the case of some individuals the 3¾% tax-free income is equivalent to a rate of about 14% from taxable bonds.

Individuals to whom the question of taxation is a vital matter should apply to the Liberty Loan Committee, 120 Broadway, for the pamphlet, "Tax Exemption Features of the Victory Loan."

Why You Should Buy VICTORY BONDS To the Utmost

Patriotism:

It is a patriotic duty to pay the debt of victory—to pay it cheerfully and to pay it liberally. The money you lend your Government pays the Army's meal ticket, the Army's payroll, the Army's transportation bill.

—but if you feel that you are compelled to sacrifice patriotism and look to your own welfare—forget patriotism—look at the question from a cold-blooded business standpoint.

Business:

The banks of the country can take this Victory Loan if it should prove necessary—but every bond bought by the banks because of the failure of a citizen to support the loan means simply this—

That the purchasing power of your money which you withhold will decrease accordingly, because bank buying will mean additional inflation of currency—more credit liability and higher prices. It will mean that industry, business and commerce must suffer because the banks will be unable to loan money in sufficient quantities and at a fair rate to the business man. If business and industry suffer, every one of us will suffer.

Profit:

If you buy your share of these Victory Bonds and thereby aid in lowering the cost of living, the increased purchasing power of your money will pay for the bonds you buy. It will mean a lighter burden of taxes in future years.

Think it over in the light of a business proposition from your Government—then enter your subscription for the loan to your utmost capacity. If you enter your subscription through this institution we assure you of our most sincere appreciation. Please consider the facilities of our entire organization at your disposal.

Are You Seeking Real Production?

IT MATTERS NOT how limited or how extensive the scope of an enterprise may be, everyone—manufacturing or contemplating manufacture—is confronted with certain vital questions.

1. Exact character of product.
2. Mechanical practicability.
3. Commercial worth.
4. Most economical method of development.
5. Expense of development warranted by commercial worth.
6. Value of enterprise as an investment.
7. Proper tooling for economical production, thus providing for standardization and interchangeability of parts.

Look for products bearing this seal

Knowledge of these factors spells "PREPAREDNESS" and preparedness spells "SUCCESS."

With these points soundly determined, economy and efficiency must result. If, however, you have not soundly determined these all-important elements, you are not prepared for production.

The S-A-S MANAGEMENT, by reason of its exceptional experience and laboratory facilities, can apply its methods of investigation, development and production and determine for you in advance what you may expect from your enterprise in the future. Uncertainty is thus reduced to a minimum, while the all too frequent speculative elements are practically eliminated.

If you are facing difficult problems in development or production, our services are at your command, and if necessary we will assume management of your product—its development and manufacture—in our own mechanical laboratories.

HYLAN SEES BIG TAX LOAD IN SALARY BILL

Mayor Indicates in Statement That He Will Veto Measure for Increase in Teachers' Pay.

WILL GIVE ANSWER TODAY

Says He Has Been Urged to Sign Bill Because It Would Be a Popular Thing for Him.

Mayor Hylan indicated yesterday that he would veto the legislative bill now before him for increasing teachers' salaries. He gave out this statement at the City Hall:

"I am and always will be in favor of good salaries for teachers in our public schools, especially those in the lower grades. The Board of Estimate and Apportionment only recently granted an extra allowance of $1,800,000 to the Board of Education to be divided among teachers receiving $1,820 and less, and is even now making an investigation to locate and rectify any specific cases of unfairly small pay. It must be quite evident, therefore, to those outside the Department of Education that the Board of Estimate and Apportionment cannot be charged with being stingy to the school teachers.

"The rent-payers seem to have their hands pretty full just now, and I cannot forget that I am the Mayor for them also. If this bill to raise salaries indiscriminately becomes a law, it will pile from ten to twenty million dollars a year onto the already heavy tax burden which is now carried by the rent-payers.

On the other hand, I have been urged to approve this mandatory measure on the ground that it will be a very popular thing for me to do. I am told that all the teachers and all their friends will actively resent my disapproval of it, and that after all nobody cares very much what anything costs the city treasury.

"I will submit my formal and official conclusions to the Governor tomorrow."

Mink and Otter Skins Bring $870,000 at St. Louis Sale.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, May 6.—An impromptu Victory Loan drive on the International Fur Exchange this afternoon brought subscriptions of $902,500 in twenty minutes, this in addition to over $1,000,000 already subscribed.

The day opened with 4,700 otter, which were well contended for. The top price was $50 and the bulk of the selling from $12 to $30, with the lowest around $2. The total realized was $91,868.

There was a capacity attendance for 100,000 mink which opened with a lot of eighteen large darks at $19.25 each. Nineteen small darks brought $15.75 each. The bidding ran from $9 to $15 for the large prime darks, although some good lots went below those figures. Pale and poor stuff brought from $1 to $5, according to size.

The mink market was widely distributed. Paris bought some choice darks, London likewise, and New York bought heavily, while Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, Minneapolis, Toronto, Montreal, Portland, and San Francisco participated in the fine goods. The bidding was extremely active throughout and all the mink was exceptionally well contended for.

The highest price of $23.25 was reached late in the afternoon, this going to New York. The mink selling closed after 6 o'clock with a total of $778,904 and with 15,800 lynx cat and 14,400 wildcat still to sell. The day's total was over $870,000, bringing the sales to date to over $7,500,000.

The official market announcement quotes: Northern otter advanced 20 per cent, Southern otter advanced 10 per cent, mink advanced 50 per cent. Simple skins went at $26 each, the highest price ever paid in a sale. The previous high price was $19.75.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Market firmer for the better grades of creamery, with demand quite active. Some new export orders are in hand. Renovated steady. Ladles and packing stock firm and selling well. Creamery, higher than extras, a pound, 56@56¼c; extras, 92 score, 55@55½c; firsts, 88 to 91 score, 53½@54¼c; seconds, 83 to 87 score, 51@53c; lower grades, 49@50c; unsalted, higher than extras, 58½@59c; extras, 57½@58c; firsts, 55@56½c; seconds, 53@54c; State dairy tubs, finest, 54@55c; good to prime, 52@53c; common to fair, 46@51c; renovated, extras, 51c; firsts, 49@50c; lower grades, 46@48c; imitation creamery, firsts, 48@49c; ladles, current make, firsts, 46½@48c; seconds, 45c; lower grades, 43@44c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 44c; No. 2, 43c; lower grades, 39@42½c.

EGGS.—Most receivers opened their stores for the receipt of goods coming from the docks, but the trade was limited and confined chiefly to the delivery of goods on previous sale. The tone of the market holds firm, with the tendency on strictly fine qualities still slightly in sellers' favor, although we hear of no business to establish any change in the quotations. Nearby white eggs have accumulated and the market is rather weak in the ranges quoted. Duck eggs have ruled very dull of late and there is an accumulation which holders are pressing for sale at lower prices. Fresh gathered, extras, a dozen, 47¼@48c; storage packed, extra firsts, 47c; firsts, 45½@46¼c; gathered, extra firsts, 46½@47c; firsts, Northerly sections, 44½@46c; Southerly sections, 43¾@45c; seconds and poorer, 40@43c; dirties, No. 1, 41@42c; No. 2 and poorer, 36@40c; checks, good to choice, dry, 40@40¼c; under grades, 34@39c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western, hennery whites, fine to fancy, 52@53c; ordinary to prime, 47@51c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 47@51c; Pacific Coast, whites, extras, 52c; Western and Southern, gathered whites, 49@50c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby, hennery browns, 49@50c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 44@48c; duck eggs, nearby Indian Runner, fancy 60@62c; Baltimore, 55@58c; Virginia, 52@58c; Western and other Southern, good to prime, 52@56c; Far Southern, common to fair, 40c; goose eggs, 60@75c.

VICTORY LOAN

As a short term investment the 3¾% tax exempt Victory Notes are ideal for the large investor.

Not only are they attractive in themselves, but a subscriber may now purchase and hold a maximum of $20,000 of the old Liberty Loans and be exempt from surtaxes for five years if he takes one-third as much in the Victory Notes.

In addition, the Victory Loan act allows an independent purchase of $30,000 more of any of the old loans, with full exemption on surtaxes for four years.

In all, one may now hold $160,000 of exempt Liberty Bonds aside from any amount of First 3½s or Victory 3¾% notes.

U. S. Trade and Imperial Preference

Preferential trade within the British Empire will shortly become a fact. When it arrives, American manufacturers with plants located in Canada will be particularly well equipped to develop the potentialities of the immense markets of the British possessions. Many wideawake American manufacturers, not yet located in Canada, are already investigating the possibilities of the opportunities to be created by Imperial Preference.

With 345 branches in all parts of the Dominion, the Union Bank of Canada, through its New York Agency, is in a position to furnish American manufacturers, interested in the possibilities of the British markets, with dependable information in regard to factory sites, transportation facilities and labor and financial conditions in Canada.

OILS and CAUTION

A leading New York Daily pertinently remarks:

"During the last few weeks the speculative craze for oil stocks has created fertile ground for the flotation of many companies, which offer nothing more tangible as to real oil development than hope."

We echo this sentiment. There are, however, many substantial and meritorious issues in which commitments should prove profitable. Remember that intelligent investment is based on three fundamentals

AIM TO PROSECUTE CROOKED DEBTORS

This Campaign to be Kept Up by the National Association of Credit Men.

TYPICAL EXAMPLES GIVEN

Purpose Is Not to Punish Mistakes of Judgment, but Only Cases of Deliberate Fraud.

Declaring that with the end of the war hundreds of alleged business men, who found it more profitable to be honest during the conflict than to risk arrest operating at their regular vocations, have resumed swindling wholesale houses by obtaining merchandise for which they never intend to pay, the National Association of Credit Men last night announced that it is continuing its campaign against professional debtors with renewed vigor.

Because many credit men, anxious to dispose of goods on hand for which there is not the marked demand that existed prior to the signing of the armistice, are not as cautious as they were some few months ago when they demanded cash, gave short terms and sold only to highly rated customers, the National Investigation and Prosecution Department of the association, which has 28,000 members, has broadened the scope of its activities and increased its staff of trained business investigators.

Freas B. Snyder, Chairman of the National Investigation and Prosecution Committee, last night issued the following statement:

"Realizing that the only way to fight commercial frauds successfully and punish the perpetrators is to have the machinery ready for instant action, the National Association of Credit Men has taken steps to curb organized gangs of alleged business men, professing to be engaged in legitimate enterprises, who aim to defraud firms throughout the country out of millions of dollars annually by obtaining merchandise on credit, deliberately planning to avoid payment for the same.

"It is not the desire or intention of the National Investigation and Prosecution Department to take legal action against honest business men, who, through misfortune, errors of judgment or unexpected circumstances, get into financial difficulties. On the contrary, the association aims to co-operate with them in making friendly adjustments of their affairs. Those cases that are not deliberate, preconceived frauds, but lapses of failing debtors, will be given the consideration they deserve.

"Determined to protect the business men of the nation, the association will show no mercy to those persons whose principal occupation in the commercial world seems to be going into bankruptcy, who conceal their assets, give preference to relatives or friends, and whose records prove that they have always walked on the shady side of business streets, fearful of our searchlights lest the glare penetrate into the inner shrines of their mercenary souls.

"Realizing the situation that has arisen as a result of the end of hostilities, the Investigation and Prosecution Department is now keeping tab on all bankruptcy cases throughout the country. The association's trained trade investigators, who work along different lines than those usually followed by the average detective, using no stool pigeons and no 'women in the case' to obtain evidence, get detailed information from the statements of bankrupts, making especially careful inquiries when there appears to be evidence indicating that assets have been concealed, goods secretly disposed of, funds placed in relatives' names, or other methods employed to defraud creditors.

"Supplementing our staff of investigators, of which C. W. West, who has been exposing trade frauds for more than twenty years, is the dean, this department has the full aid of the local associations of credit men and their probers and the co-operation of the Post Office and Department of Justice officials.

"Appreciating the fact that this association represents the leading commercial houses in the country, the press of America has been most liberal in giving publicity to cases where there was established conclusive proof of intent to defraud. I want to thank the editors for their co-operation in this drive to stamp out business crimes.

"Believing that the time has arrived for legislators in the various States to pass measures for the protection of business enterprises, I wish to call attention to the fact that laws should be enacted making it necessary for truck men, express men, and other such carriers to file records in their offices whenever merchandise is moved. Operating at night, many deadbeats have goods, which they obtained on credit, removed from their establishments to another place, often another city, and eventually sold under some other person's name. It is now difficult to trace such movements because no records are kept. If the goods were shipped via rail it would be easy to learn of their destination through the roads' records.

"Using a different alias in each case, one man has 'failed' seven times during the last ten years. His first failure, which was probably an honest one, was for $7,000. His latest amounted to more than $100,000. The peculiar part of this case is that in each instance the same creditors were swindled, indicating that they did not profit by their past experiences, but again became victims of the same system which the man used throughout his career.

"Following an investigation made by this department, five members of one family in Savannah were recently convicted in the United States District Court of a conspiracy to conceal assets from the trustees in bankruptcy and were punished with varying sentences.

"Acting on evidence furnished by our association, a Federal Judge in Detroit has just sentenced Joseph Greenbaum to two years in jail for concealing assets in bankruptcy."

Railway Surgeons End Meeting.

How best to combat influenza, which is expected to recur in epidemic form this Fall, was discussed at the annual meeting of the Association of Railway Chief Surgeons, which ended at the Hotel Commodore yesterday. Dr. C. W. Hopkins of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway was elected President of the association, Dr. Duncan Evans of the St. Louis, Chattanooga & Tennessee Railway, Vice President, and Dr. Louis J. Mitchell, Secretary and Treasurer. The surgeons visited the Army Base Hospital No. 4 on Staten Island.

American Exhibition in Christiania.

CHRISTIANIA, May 5.—The American exhibition to be held here this Autumn promises to be a great success. Space has been reserved by 120 Norwegian importers who distribute goods from 300 American firms.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Among the speakers at the coming annual Spring meeting and dinner of the New York Credit Men's Association, which will be held at the Hotel Astor on May 15, will be George Wharton Pepper of Philadelphia. Other speakers announced are the Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis and Francis Harvey Greene. E. S. Boteler, head of the association, will preside.

The Bush Terminal Company has appointed Arthur L. Benedict as head of the company's shoe and findings department. Mr. Benedict is an ex-President of the National Shoe Travelers' Association, and last year was President of the Boot and Shoe Travelers' Association of New York.

OUR many years on the business front have witnessed startling instances of the big becoming small and contrariwise.
We value in a Client the disposition to grow, rather than a condition of mere bigness.
It is our ambition to have a hand in some of the remarkable growths inevitably due in this reconstruction era.

Metal Calliope a Novelty.

An article to delight the noise-loving youngster's heart is a metal calliope recently brought out by a novelty house. This toy differs somewhat from the usual whistle in that a metal bird on the end of the instrument moves its beak when it is blown. It is made of metal, and the air passing through the tube causes the movement of the beak.

Knitted Neckwear Featured.

Knitted men's neckwear is getting more than its usual share of attention from the retailers at present. These goods have been featured in window displays during the last week to a greater extent than in some time. Cross stripes in black and white and colors are to be seen, and crochet knit appears to be the favorite of the high-class shops. By some the renewed interest in neckwear of this kind is ascribed to the popularity of the soft collar, which seems to go hand in hand with the knitted scarf.

Electric Toys Sell Well.

Reports from the manufacturing end of the toy trade tell of a continued demand for mechanical and electrical articles. In the latter, recent business has been very active on AMBITIOUS.

Absorb this!! A year ago I resigned as sales manager of the largest automobile distributor in the country. Mine was a responsible and lucrative position, but I wanted to increase my earning capacity. I had reached the top of the ladder. I looked over the business field with a fine comb and rejected innumerable propositions. At last, I hit on the greatest business in the world, LIFE INSURANCE, which had been presented to me many times before, but never until I tried the business did I realize the following:
A delightful business, calling on the highest type of business and professional men, offering them a commodity of the most unquestionable character. Every day doing some good for my fellow-men, and at the same time building and enjoying an income far beyond my fondest hopes. Your compensation, based on commission, will be limited only by your own intelligent application. You, ambitious salesman, come in and let's have a talk, and let me thoroughly prove my statements to you. If you are in the 30's or 40's, have demonstrated your ability in your present position, if you are making $3,500 or upwards, and you are eager to double, yes, treble, your present income, will you hold yourself open and permit me to prove that I have the very opportunity you have been waiting for. COL. DARRACH WILL HEAD COLLEGE HERE

Columbia Names Him Dean of Physicians and Surgeons After July 1.

HE SUCCEEDS DR. LAMBERT

Served with American and British Armies in the War—Formerly at Roosevelt and Bellevue.

Colonel William Darrach, M. D., has been appointed Dean of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University, it was announced at the university last night, to succeed Dr. Samuel W. Lambert, whose resignation was accepted by the Trustees of the university a month ago to take effect on July 1. Colonel Darrach, who served as a surgeon with the British and the American Expeditionary Forces at the western front for more than two years, received his discharge from the American Army less than a month ago.

Colonel Darrach, who is well known for his administrative ability and organization work among New York hospitals, including Roosevelt and the Presbyterian Hospital, received his commission in May, 1917, and left for the western front with Base Hospital No. 2 on May 14, 1917. From July 20 to Sept. 14, 1917, he served with the British Casualty Station No. 47 in France, and from February until July, 1918, he was the commanding officer of General Hospital No. 1 of the British Expeditionary Forces.

Transferred to the American forces as consulting surgeon with the First Corps, he served until October, when he was attached to the headquarters of the First Army. A month later he was appointed senior consulting surgeon at the Third Army Headquarters. Colonel Darrach received the rank of Lieutenant Colonel in June, 1918, and was promoted to Colonel last March for distinguished service.

In his new position here, Colonel Darrach will face many problems of great importance to medical science in the present reconstruction period after war. The College of Physicians and Surgeons reports an increasing number of applicats for admission, both to first year classes and to advanced standing, and the demand has become so pressing that new measures must be devised to accommodate them and to regulate the influx of students from other cities who seek the facilities for laboratory work now afforded in New York.

Colonel Darrach, who was born in Germantown, Penn., on March 12, 1876, and was graduated from Yale in 1897, took his degree in medicine at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in 1901. He is holder of the Master of Arts degree from Columbia. After serving two years as interne at the Presbyterian Hospital, he entered the Department of Anatomy of the College of Physicians and Surgeons. In 1906 he became associated with Roosevelt Hospital and in 1910 with Bellevue.

The appointment of William E. Studdiford, M.D., as Professor of Obstetrics and Gynecology in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, to succeed the late Edwin B. Cragin, M.D., was also announced yesterday. Dr. Studdiford will take a leading part in the enlargement of the work of Sloane Hospital and the Vanderbilt Clinic, it was said. Several promotions in the medical staff were also announced at Columbia University, the list including Drs. Allen O. Whipple, Alwyn W. Papenheimer, Benjamin P. Merrell, Louis Cassamajor, and Oliver S. Strong.

WANT LEGION'S HEAD TO BE A PRIVATE

Delegates Will Oppose Election of Officer to Lead Soldiers' Organization.

MOVE FOR CHANGE OF NAME

Objection Made to Indorsement of Universal Training Policy.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, May 6.—The caucus of the Temporary Executive Committee of the American Legion, the proposed national soldiers, sailors, marines, and civilian organization, was held tonight at the Hotel Statler to outline plans for the convention to be held at the Shubert-Jefferson Theatre beginning Thursday.

Lieut. Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Temporary Chairman, and Lieut. Col. Bennet C. Clark, Vice Chairman of the committee, explained the plans for the gathering.

The question of asking the convention to establish legal aid and employment bureaus for soldiers was taken up.

It is becoming increasingly evident as delegates arrive that there will be much opposition from former enlisted men to Colonel Roosevelt, or any other officer heading the legion. Many of the enlisted men believe that the organization is likely to become an "officers' club," despite statements to the contrary by Colonel Roosevelt. They will insist that a "buck" private head the organization, and they say they want a man who is not a member of a wealthy or influential family.

Some delegates say that the name "American Legion" is not typical enough of the proposed organization and that the name should embody some reference to the great war.

A fight developed at the session over the question of putting the convention on record for universal military training. One faction, of which Colonel Roosevelt is the head, will take the stand that question of policy should go over until the November meeting.

SHERRY'S TO MOVE MAY 17.

Fifty-eighth Street Plan Modified by "Prohibition and Bolshevism."

Louis Sherry announced yesterday that on May 17 he will abandon his restaurant at Forty-third Street and Fifth Avenue, and will open at Fifty-eighth Street a new establishment for catering and the manufacture and sale of candies and pastries. With the present restaurant will pass the ballrooms and dining rooms, which for a generation have been the scene of some of New York's most brilliant social gatherings.

Prohibition and war-born Bolshevism, Mr. Sherry declared, were two things largely responsible for his determination to leave the restaurant business. Even if he overcame the national dryness, there still remained the service question. "I am not at the point," he said, "where I cannot increase my staff of waiters without admitting Bolsheviki, but I will not submit my patrons to have their food thrown at them."

In a statement issued yuesteday it was further announced that the formation of Louis Sherry, Incorporated, a four-hundred-thousand-dollar corporation, to carry on the candy and catering business, comprehends an alliance with the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, which will put the Sherry service into that hostelry. Sherry's will not, as had previously been proposed, occupy quarters opposite its present site.

Part of the business will go to the Waldorf and the rest to the new shop, for which Mr. Sherry has leased quarters at the southeast corner of Fifty-eighth Street and Fifth Avenue. C. R. Wilson, for many years Sherry's manager, will be Vice President in charge of operating details.

The alliance with the Waldorf, Mr. Sherry believes, is an excellent business stroke. The public rooms at the Waldorf will care for the functions regularly held at Sherry's.

The lease for the new quarters was negotiated through the Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company. Sherry's present place will be occupied by the Guaranty Trust Company.

Who Sells
Hart Schaffner & Marx Good All-Wool Clothes
in New York?

A returning soldier needed some new clothes. He had always worn Hart Schaffner & Marx Clothes, and wanted his new ones to bear their label.

So he asked the hotel clerk who sold Hart Schaffner & Marx Clothes in New York. The clerk told him instantly. To make sure that the hotel clerk was right, he asked the porter, and got the same answer.

He began to wonder if everyone in New York knew who sold Hart Schaffner & Marx Clothes, and as an experiment, he asked in turn, a policeman, a stranger, a salesman in a jewelry store, and a ticket seller in the Grand Central.

Each in turn gave the information without hesitation.

"That proves," he said to us in telling the story, "that it pays to handle the clothes of a world famous manufacturer; for people not only know the clothes but they also make it a point to know the name of the merchant who sells them."

A sign that a Regiment cheered

Just a painted sign on the wall of an ancient building in France! "Not much of a thrill in that," you'll say

YET a regiment of American soldiers, dog-weary from a long hike, dripping wet from an all-day downpour, broke into cheers at sight of it You'd have thought they had come unexpectedly on a Statue of Liberty in Brest

That sign represented "God's country"—a glimpse of home that had gone across the sea to meet them

When we placed our signs in the prominent locations in Brest, Bordeaux, St. Nazaire, Nantes, and the other ports of embarkation in France, we hoped they'd be more than merely messages that let the boys know they'd find our clothes—stylish, all wool, guaranteed—ready for them when they got home

We are glad they feel as they do about it If those signs of ours over there give our boys a little glimpse of "back home" that cheers, we're more than repaid—even if that is the one and only thing those signs do
